Roosevelt's Son Defeats Tammany in House Race

New York, May 17 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., won a seat in the House tonight in a triumphant battle with Tammany Hall which his father fought early in his political career 35 years ago.

Roosevelt, running on the Liberal and Four Freedoms tickets after Tammany denied him the Democratic nomination, garnered 41,146 votes in the 20th District's 179 voting districts.

Municipal Court Justice Benjamin H. Shalleck, who got the Tammany nod, received 24,352 votes.

William H. McIntyre, Republican, won 10,020. Annette Rubinstein, American Labor, trailed with 5348.

Defeat Conceded

The lanky son of one of the Nation's famous political families was the first of the late President's five children to run for office.

He piled up such a commanding lead in the Twentieth Congressional District special election that his Democratic opponent conceded defeat an hour after the polls closed.

The bitterly fought contest, which kept Manhattan's West Side in an uproar for a month, was for the seat of the late Sol Bloom, veteran Democrat who won 13 successive terms in Congress.

Roosevelt assailed Tammany throughout his campaign but at the same time he announced his support of President Truman's "Fair Deal" program, with emphasis on housing and civil rights.

He described himself as a 100 per cent Democrat and is expected to try to serve under that party label in Congress. His term runs until the next regular election in November, 1950.

The Democratic national chairman Senator McGrath of Rhode Island, put the national Administration behind Shalleck in the campaign. State Democratic Chairman Paul E. Fitzpatrick followed suit.

But many top Democrats, including old New Dealers prominent in New York State politics, supported young F. D. R.

The defeat was a sharp blow to Tammany, which is facing a city election next November snubbed by Mayor William O'Dwyer. Tammany also is smarting from a drubbing in an important Manhattan surrogate fight last year.

Roosevelt said in a statement "I am deeply grateful to the people of the Twentieth Congressional District and I will do my utmost to serve them well.

"This is not a personal victory but rather belongs to the hundreds of volunteers who worked so tirelessly and unselfishly in this good fight for honest, clean government and liberal principles."

Tammany spokesmen attacked Roosevelt in the election battle, calling him "junior," a playboy, immature and an interloper in the Twentieth District.

13,200 Homeless in Fort Worth

Tornadoes and Floods Kill At Least Six in Southwest

From Wire Dispatches

Tornadoes and flood waters left six or more dead and damage in the millions of dollars in the Southwest last night.

The toll was heaviest at Fort Worth, Texas, where a 12-inch cloudburst sent the Trinity River through its dikes to cover large sections of the city. Four were listed as dead and two missing, and the Red Cross said 13,200 Fort Worth residents were homeless.

At least two persons were killed and eight injured by a twister near Spur, Tex.

Another tornado struck Meeker, Okla., 15 miles from Shawnee. Nine persons were hospitalized for injuries suffered at a high school gymnasium where an indoor softball game was being played.

Pumping Station Out

No injuries were reported from a third twister, which struck the naval ammunition depot at Hastings, Nebr., to do $50,000 damage.

Fort Worth, a city of 340,000 population, was left without a water supply when its main pumping station was inundated.

Eight 1500-gallon trucks came from Dallas to haul drinking water. Two big pumping station motors were sent from Dallas but Fort Worth City Manager W. O. Jones said it would be several days before the paralyzed water supply could be restored.

Dallas Threatened

Water in some areas was as deep as 18 feet. Police estimated a tenth of the city's land area was under water.

The high water rolling down the Trinity River threatened the lowlands of Dallas, 30 miles to the east. The Weather Bureau there predicted the Trinity would reach 40 to 42 feet there Wednesday, causing "major flood conditions during the next 8 to 10 days."

Fort Worth schools were closed and hospitals canceled all but major surgery to conserve water.

Automobile travel downtown from west and north sections was stopped by high water. The Texas & Pacific Railroad started shuttle service to the cut-off sections of town.

Security Bill Cut Rescinded By Senators

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday cancelled a 5 per cent cut in the 2.4 billion dollar Labor-Federal Security bill in the worst setback yet for the coalition economy drive.

By a 43-to-41 vote, it reconsidered the only major economy it has ordered this year.

Republicans tried another motion to send the bill back to committee for a modified slash, but this failed, 41 to 44.

Then the Senate rescinded the original cut by another 43-to-41 vote. With the economy bloc reeling, the unpruned Labor-Federal Security bill was passed by a voice vote. It now goes to a House-Senate conference to adjust differences.

Over-All Cut Hinted

A hint that leading members of the Senate Appropriations Committee may attempt an "over-all" cut in appropriations at the end of the session, rather than slash the bills separately, was dropped in the Senate.

Senator John L. McClellan (D. Ark.) said such a move is afoot in the Appropriations Committee and could lead to a sessions-end saving.

Senator William F. Knowland (R. Calif.) warned the Senate, however, that such a move might be knocked out by a simple point of order and, further, risked a presidential veto.

Ferguson To Fight On

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), who led the economy fight yesterday in the absence of Senator Robert A. Taft, said he will continue to move for bill-by-bill cuts, even though the Senate has erased its only horizontal reduction.

If these fail, Ferguson said Republican economizers will "join wholeheartedly" in any Appropriations Committee move for over-all reductions at the close of Congress.

But Ferguson cautioned that the House, jealous of its power to originate appropriation measures, may have to launch any omnibus cut.

Agriculture Bill Next

The Michigan Republican today will offer a series of motions to cut back the big Agriculture appropriation bill, including one to let the department itself do the cutting.

The effort was apparently foredoomed, but Ferguson said: "The world hates a coward."

The Senate originally voted 44 to 37 on April 28 to send the Labor-Federal Security Bill back to committee for a 5 per cent cut, but later refused to vote a similar slash in the three billion dollar Treasury-Postoffice Bill.

CIO Left Wing Beaten Twice In Board Vote

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The left-wing faction suffered two stinging defeats yesterday as the CIO leadership launched what appeared to be an all-out battle to smash the followers of the Communist Party line.

By a vote of 38 to 11, the CIO's executive board, in closed session here, censured the leftish leaders of the Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers' Union for conducting a vilification campaign against CIO President Phil Murray.

By an identical vote, the board then went on to approve the splintering away of five locals from the Mine, Mill Union and their affiliating with the United Steelworkers, Murray's home union.

Both resolutions were instigated by President Murray, who first declared war on the Commies and sympathizers within the CIO at the Portland convention last year, but who has been immobilized by illness since.

11 Followed Red Party Line

The 11 votes against the resolution came from the representatives of the 11 CIO unions which have generally followed the Red Party line, and which have since the war's end taken sharp opposition to CIO policies.

The ballots approving the resolutions were cast by the representatives of 31 unions which are standing firm behind Murray and his anti-Communist stand.

President Murray later told a press conference that the 11 international unions comprising the left bloc contained but 12 per cent of the CIO's 6,500,000 members.

Murray indicated that more blows would fall on the left wingers at the executive committee meeting today, and that punitive action would be forthcoming at the annual convention, to be held October 31 at Cleveland.

The censuring resolution charged the Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers with "using the Communist weapon of fear, intolerance, racial hatred, threats and other methods which have no place in the decent ranks of trade unionism."

Steelworkers Involved

The "vicious actions" were an outgrowth of an incident, according to the resolution, involving the rivalry of the Mine, Mill Union and the Steelworkers in the Red Mountain section near Bessemer, Ala.

Earlier in the day, Murray warned the left-wing unions that they must clean house or get out of the CIO. The defiant group, which includes the 650,000-strong United Electrical Workers, and the powerful West Coast Longshoremen led by Harry Bridges, have thus far taken the position they will do neither.

AEC Tracing Missing Bit Of Uranium

The Atomic Energy Commission last night announced that a small quantity of Uranium-235, fissionable material used in the atomic bomb, had been missing from one of its laboratories for a short time but that most of it had been recovered.

The commission added that the remainder is not believed to be "lost or stolen" but is being sought in waste material from the laboratory, where the recovered portion was found.

The announcement came amid a flurry of excitement in the Capital caused by a published report that three-quarters of a pound of Uranium-235 had "vanished" from a safe at the Commission's Argonne National Laboratory near Chicago and that 40 FBI agents had conducted an unsuccessful search for it.

The commission said that, all told, 32 grams (1.05 ounces) were originally found to be missing but that 25 grams have been accounted for.

Early in the evening the FBI acknowledged tersely that it had conducted an investigation but refused all details.

Finally, Carl Shugg, deputy general manager of the Atomic Energy Commission, issued the following statement:

"In response to press inquiries concerning reports of loss or theft of Uranium-235 from the Argonne National Laboratory, the facts are as follows:

"The installations of the atomic energy program account rigorously for all fissionable materials brought onto or taken off their premises. This involves chemical analysis of large quantities of residues from machining, chemical and other operations involving uranium and plutonium in various forms.

Discrepancy Noted in February

"Periodic inventories are taken. In the February inventory at the Argonne National Laboratory there was a discrepancy of 32 grams or 1.05 ounces of U-235 contained in various forms of uranium metal.

"An analysis of all laboratory waste was undertaken and the discrepancy was reported to the FBI. To date 25 grams of the 32 have been accounted for at Oak Ridge through analysis of contents of containers of salvage material, machine turnings, chemical solutions and so forth sent there from the Argonne laboratory for recovery treatment.

"The remaining seven grams—less than ¼ ounce—is not believed to have been stolen or lost as analysis of the waste is still continuing.

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), a member of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, told a reporter the report was "startling and fantastic if true."

In New York, the Daily News said in a copyrighted story from Washington that disappearance of three-quarters of a pound of Uranium 235 was discovered at the Chicago laboratory February 14.

The News said the loss was not reported to the FBI until March 28 because AEC officials thought the material had been "lost."

Since March 28, the newspaper said, more than 40 FBI agents have searched unsuccessfully for the uranium.

The missing material, said the newspaper, was part of a shipment from the Oak Ridge, Tenn., plant where it is produced.

Clay Lionized Here on Return; Sees German Freedom Gaining

Post Reporter

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, lionized here on his return from Germany yesterday, said that "a flame of freedom" may be spreading through that country.

"It is our only hope for a peaceful and stable Europe that we encourage that flame," he said.

The 52-year-old soldier, who trumped Russia's blockade of Berlin with the airlift and thus won a round of the cold war, was acclaimed here like the glamorous heroes of the earlier shooting war.

President Truman, in decorating General Clay with a second Oak Leaf Cluster to his Distinguished Service Medal, recalled that he had performed a similar ceremony in the case of Eisenhower, Nimitz, Wainwright and the others. He said that honoring Clay "for services of supreme value to his country and to humanity" gave him just as much pleasure.

General Clay, the decoration dangling from his chest, took a few steps across the White House rose garden and kissed his attractive, silver-haired wife.

"Are you passing those out?" Vice President Alben W. Barkley asked Mrs. Clay.

"Yes, come and get it," said Mrs. Clay, smiling.

The Kentuckian did. Mrs. Clay blushed and then joined in the laughter that arose from the 150 notables who were looking on.

From the White House, General Clay journeyed to Capitol Hill, where he was welcomed with cheers and whistling. He made two extemporaneous speeches, one in the House and the other in the Senate, and demonstrated to the lawmakers that he had an eloquent tongue as well as a sharp mind and an iron nerve.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, in introducing Clay to the House, said:

"An old friend has come home from his labors, which have been stupendous and great. His inprint will be left on world history."

Later, at a news conference in the Pentagon, Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, introduced General Clay to the reporters as a man who has been given a "hard job," and had done it in "a superior way."

Clay, asked about the election in Russian-controlled Germany, said that when one third of the people voted "No" in a police state, it was "a vote of considerable courage."

He said that there had been a lessening tension in Europe since

Brazil's Chief To Receive Key to City At Reception

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

In French it's bienvenu. In Portuguese it's bem vindo. In English it's welcome.

And a rousing one it will be, today, for Brazilian President Eurico Gaspar Dutra, who is scheduled to arrive at National Airport at 4 p. m. to visit President Harry S. Truman in response to an invitation extended to him nearly two years ago.

The motorcade will come into the District on Memorial Bridge, go along 23d st. to Constitution ave., down Constitution to 6th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., back along Pennsylvania to 14th st. and the reception stand and then by Pennsylvania ave. to Blair House.

His Sixty-Fourth Birthday

It will be a day of double celebration for the stocky army general, who has served as chief executive of the largest country in South America since January, 1946.

Happy Birthday Greeting To Be Sung for Dutra

It won't be in Portuguese, but those who attend the official reception for President Dutra in Post Square are going to sing "Happy Birthday" to him.

Already in readiness to make his 64th birthday a memorable occasion is a handsome birthday cake, which President Harry Truman is to present to President Dutra at the close of the official reception in front of the District Building.

Today is President Dutra's sixty-fourth birthday. Welcoming throngs are expected to turn out to help him celebrate it, and his second trip to the United States.

When President Dutra was last here, it was as a guest of the United States Government, which presented him with the Legion of Merit in 1943. Then, Dutra was Minister of War in the cabinet of President Getulio Vargas, and the United States and Brazil were allies in the war against the Axis powers.

Today, when his plane wings in from Key West at 4 p.m. on the last leg of the long hop from Brazil, President Dutra and his party will be met by President Truman and his Cabinet. The two Presidents will lead a 30-car motorcade past an honor guard of 3500 men in uniform to Post Square, where official welcoming ceremonies will be held in front of the District Building.

All Federal and District workers who can be spared from their jobs will be released to welcome Dutra to Washington.

A canopy of planes will cover the route of the motorcade and representatives of veterans, patriotic and civic groups as well as school children and Boy and Girl Scouts will take up positions along the line to cheer for the visiting President.

13 Bands Along Route

In addition, 13 bands will be stationed along the route from the District side of Memorial Bridge to 14th and Pennsylvania ave.

Wallgren Bid Is Withdrawn By Truman

President Truman yesterday surrendered in his fight to make his good friend, Mon C. Wallgren, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, withdraw the nomination after Wallgren had asked him to do so in "the public interest."

The Senate Armed Services Committee, after concluding that Wallgren lacked qualifications for the job, voted to table the nomination on March 15. Thereafter it was pigeonholed.

Who Mr. Truman now has in mind for the post, if anybody, was an unanswered question yesterday. There was some talk that he might name Wayne Coy, now the $10,00-a-year chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. The job for which Wallgren was turned down pays $14,000 a year, and pending legislation would boost the figure to $20,000 a year.

When the Senate Armed Services Committee blackballed Wallgren in March, members expressed the opinion that he could be confirmed for almost any other job in the Government.

But Wallgren said yesterday that he would "rather not consider anything else in Washington." He said he had received a couple of offers in private industry and might accept one of them.

The Wallgren nomination was the second that President Truman had been forced to withdraw since he entered the White House. The first was that of Edwin W. Pauley, California oil man, to be Undersecretary of the Navy in 1946. It was withdrawn after Harold L. Ickes, then Secretary of the Interior, and others had opposed Pauley because of his oil interests and the explosive Tidelands issue.

Russians Upset In One-Ticket German Vote

Berlin, May 17 (AP).—Germany's Communists admitted tonight that their Russian-sponsored ticket for a "People's Congress" gained only 61.6 per cent of the votes cast in a two-day election in the Soviet occupation zone.

So unqualified was the defeat, for Russia as well as the German Communist Party, that Western allies expressed amazement that the figures were published so openly.

Russia had hoped to use the election to strengthen its hand at the Big Four Foreign Ministers' Conference which opens in Paris Monday.

90 Per Cent Affirmative Is Usual

Normally, in an Iron Curtain one-ticket election, an affirmative vote of well over 90 per cent is taken for granted.

Here is what happened in the Soviet zone election, according to official figures:

Votes cast: 12,887,234.
Percentage of eligibles who voted: 95.2.
Votes for the ticket: 7,943,949.
Votes against: 4,080,272.
Invalid ballots: 863,013.
Percentage of "yes" votes compared to "no" votes: 66.1.
Percentage of "yes" votes in total votes cast: 61.6.

An important part of the result was the number of invalid ballots. No doubt was held among the Western allies that the overwhelming part of these were handed in by voters afraid to vote a straight "No."

It was indicated that the Communists suffered their biggest defeat in the Soviet sectors of Berlin where their ticket polled only 58 per cent of valid votes. There were 446,662 "yes" votes and 322,327 "no" votes.

There were predictions in western Berlin that the election might result in a widespread purge throughout the Soviet zone.

Taegliche Rundschau, newspaper of the Russian occupation forces, called for action against "agents of foreign interests." In western Berlin this was taken to be a threat of a revenge purge against suspected elements.

It was only after 20 hours of silence that the Communists issued the election results, which were supposed to come out as soon as the polls closed.

'Iron Clad' Liquor Case Against Cab Driver Dropped

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Prosecution of an "iron-clad" liquor law violation has been dropped in Municipal Court because two arresting officers failed to appear as witnesses in the case.

Free, after being charged for more than four months with selling whisky without a license, is Gerald Richard Barnes, 33-year-old driver of 1244 Girard st. nw.

He was arrested January 14 by Pvt. Angelo Bonaccorsy and Sgt. James Roche, a few minutes after and a few blocks from Thomas Circle, where cab driver James Rowell was beaten brutally.

Barnes denied selling the officers whisky. He contended they beat him up and shot at him three times. His attorney, Wesley Williams, charged Barnes was framed as a cover-up for the Rowell beating.

The officers said they bought whisky from Barnes with marked money.

Although the Corporation Counsel's office described the case against Barnes as "ironclad," the case was dismissed May 12 by Judge George D. Neilson for "want of prosecution."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King yesterday said he did not oppose the motion to dismiss the case against Barnes because he could not justify the continued absence of Roche Bonaccorsy when the case was scheduled for trial.

Barnes has been in court six times: once when he was arrested, once when he asked for a jury trial, three times when the case was continued, and May 12, when the Government did not object to a defense motion to dismiss for want of prosecution.

On at least three occasions, Roche and Bonaccorsy were not present, Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King said yesterday. They were not present on May 12, although in their signed statement of facts Roche and Bonaccorsy said they had bought whisky from Barnes with marked money, had recovered the marked money and had seized the whisky.

Williams predicted three months ago the case would be dropped. At that time the Government said the case would definitely be prosecuted "Why not?" Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Chalfonte asked. "It's a simple case. We have the booze; we have the marked money; we have the witnesses."

Roche and Bonaccorsy were cleared by a grand jury of any

Police Chief of Mt. Rainier Replaced at Stormy Meeting

Mt. Rainier got a new police chief last night at a stormy first meeting of the new mayor and council, which filled the town hall to overflowing.

He is John Wesley Wise, 3510 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va., a former Metropolitan Police detective sergeant. Wise replaces Eugene Plumer, a member of the Mt. Rainier force for 26 years, and takes office at 8 a. m., today.

Mayor Herbert W. Reichelt cast the deciding ballot for Wise when he broke a 2-2 council tie, after scores of citizens had pleaded with him to give Plumer another chance.

Plumer resigned in 1940 for a time from the $2900 a year job, after Mayor Norman Pruitt personally stripped him of his badge and cap. Pruitt said Plumer had been drinking in the police station.

Councilmen voting for Wise were Robert H. Merson and Gurney F. Thompson. Councilmen Frederick J. Richardson and Warren W. James voted for Plumer, who would have been eligible for retirement in three years.

Heated Campaign

Mayor Reichelt defeated former Mayor Floyd B. Mathias in one of the most heated election campaigns in the history of the town, in which reorganization of the police department was one of the issues. Councilman Thompson ran on the same ticket.

One expected result of the campaign victory is a realignment of

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Control of the policies of the proposed National Science Foundation is at stake in the current battle over the policies adopted in carrying out the Atomic Energy Commission fellowship program, it was disclosed yesterday.

Chairman Detlev W. Bronk of the National Research Council, which selects the fellowship students, told the Joint Atomic Energy Committee yesterday that his group opposed FBI loyalty checks on AEC fellowship students largely because of the long-range view of how the National Science Foundation would be affected.

Meanwhile, Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) disclosed that the committee plans to hear Hans Friestadt, admitted Communist student at the University of North Carolina, today. Disclosure that Friestadt had been granted a $1600 a year AEC fellowship precipitated the current inquiry into the entire fellowship program.

McMahon read a letter from Dr. Robert Oppenheimer, leading atomic scientist, also opposing loyalty checks.

Oppenheimer cited the fact that "the major—one might almost say the only—present peaceful application of atomic energy" depends upon a discovery by Joliot, a French Comunist, and his wife, a Communist sympathizer.

Oppenheimer said procedures

U. N. Rejects Bevin-Sforza Plan For Italy Colonies

Flushing, N. Y. (Wednesday), May 18 (U.P.).—The United Nations early today rejected the key clause of the Bevin-Sforza plan for the former Italian colonies by a vote of 33 to 17 with 8 abstentions.

The clause would have continued Britain's administration over Tripolitania until 1951 when the territory would have been transferred to Italian trusteeship.

It failed by one vote to gain the two-thirds majority required for major decisions by the General Assembly.

Although the assembly, on a paragraph by paragraph vote, previously had aproved provisions granting Britain trusteeship over Cyrenaica and France trusteeship over Fezzan, the defeat of the Tripolitania clause was expected to spell defeat for the entire measure when the Assembly votes on it later tonight.

Tax Speedup Urged To Balance Budget

A plan to balance the 1950 budget without increasing taxes, by moving up corporate tax collection dates, was introduced yesterday by an influential House Democrat.

Administration leaders appeared interested but the plan collided with a loud Republican "No." House GOP leaders called it a "fraud" and "trick bookkeeping," that would saddle the Government's own deficit financing on industry.

The "painless" tax formula, netting nearly five billion dollars more in revenue next year by requiring corporations to pay up six months earlier than they now must, was introduced by Representative Mills (D., Ark.).

"Long Overdue Reform," He Says

Mills introduced his bill after a trip to the Treasury to see Secretary Snyder and a round of talks with Democratic leaders.

Mills said his bill would wipe out the 1950 deficit without any increase in taxes, but his prime purpose was "a long overdue reform."

Individual taxpayers are now largely on a pay-as-you-go basis but corporations have 12 months after the end of their taxable year to pay their taxes in four equal installments.

The Arkansas Democrat called that "discrimination" against individual taxpayers. His bill requires corporations, as well as estates, trusts and nonresident aliens, to pay up in six months instead of 12.

Said Mills:

"While it may not be feasible to place corporations on a completely current 'pay-as-you-go' basis, my bill would be an important first step in requiring corporations to pay taxes promptly as soon as it is possible to determine the amount of their tax liability."

Doughton Reserves Comment

His statement said the bill is receiving "serious consideration by top-ranking Administration tax spokesmen, including Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee."

The Treasury and Doughton reserved immediate comment but House Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) said the plan "offers fine grounds for study and exploration."

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), called a meeting of the House GOP Policy Committee. Sitting jointly with Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, they fired a two-page blast at the Mills bill.

Martin Calls It a Fraud

Martin called the bill "a fraud suggested by the spenders in order to escape the consequences of their extravagances and to avoid economy in government."

The GOP leader said it would require at least 75 per cent of corporations to pay 1½ years' taxes in the 1950 fiscal year and "put off the day of reckoning" without adding one dollar to the Government's long-run revenue.

The Republicans called for economy, not more taxes, and said the Mills bill shows the "subterfuge to which the Truman congressional bloc is willing to go in order to avoid the objective and essential thing—which is curtailment of the Government expenditures."

Says it Would Mean Depression

Martin said the plan would push the country into a depression by taking 4.6 billion away from private industry "just at the time when most economists figure will be the critical hour which will decide whether the recession is to continue or we are to have an upswing in business."

"The first six months of next year may be the key to the economic picture," said the House GOP. "Let us not rock the boat."

Mills sugested, however, that corporations might prefer his method to an increase in taxes.

Said Mills:

"The realities of the situation are that corporations must realize that they must either pay existing tax liabilities more promptly or be confronted with the necessity for an increase in Federal taxes, most of which will surely fall upon the corporations."

Radio Jackpot

Godfrey Got $440,514 Last Year

Arthur Godfrey, radio and television star, was paid $440,514 last year by the Columbia Broadcasting System, reports to the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed yesterday.

The funnyman master of ceremonies topped the list of salaries paid performers by the network. News Commentator Lowell Thomas, however, was a close second with $420,300. The salary figures showed CBS' president Frank Stanton, was paid $109,798.

All payments for services included in the report cover income before taxes, SEC noted.

The American Broadcasting Co., whose report also was made available, paid its top performer $180,229. The sum went to Don McNeill, star of the "Breakfast Club" program.

Paul Whiteman, ABC's musical director and vice president, received $145,316, while Mark Woods, the network's president, was paid $75,000.

The National Broadcasting Co. and Mutual Broadcasting System reports have not yet meen filed with SEC.

Other high-salaried CBS personnel included: John Reed King, announcer-producer, $95,795; Tom Howard, comedian-writer, $218,751; Ed Sullivan, commentator and master of ceremonies, $53,550; Frank Cooper Associates, $165,275.

ABC paid radio artist F. Allen Russel $79,350; Commentator H. R. Baukage, $32,233; Cal Tinney, $20,800; Margaret Lynch, $62,549; Allen Funt, $78,625; and Ed and Pegeen Fitzgerald, $57,969.

Federal income taxes would take a big bite into salaries in those brackets. For a married man without children, these taxes apply to income, figured after deductions, as follows:

On $50,000 income, a $17,200 tax; on 100,000, $46,402; on $200,000, $117,524, and on $400,000, $277,545.

Senate Votes To Cancel Cut

Green (D., R. I.) moved to reconsider the April 28 vote. The votes of some Democrats who were absent before, plus a handful of switches on both sides of the aisle, enabled the motion to squeak through.

Ferguson then offered an entirely new recommit motion designed to meet complaints about the original Taft cut.

Parliamentarians had ruled that the initial cut invalidated committee increases in the House bill, and even some $13,500,000 added to the heart and cancer programs on the Senate floor.

Ferguson's new motion provided that the 5 per cent should be trimmed from the aggregate voted by the Senate, that fixed items like pensions would not be cut, and that no item could be trimmed more than 20 per cent.

But the new motion failed on a roll call, and Vice President Barkley in the chair ordered a vote on the original Taft 5 per cent cut. This was rejected by the identical ballot the Senate had voted to reconsider, 43 to 41.

Jewish Appeal's Aims Described

I. S. Turover, chief of the real estate division of the United Jewish Appeal in Washington, last night described the appeal as "an effort to provide funds for the preservation of Jewish life, values and culture."

He spoke before a fund-raising meeting of the division at the Statler hotel.

"This drive marks the turning point from philanthropy to reconstruction," he said.

flag will blend with the American red, white and blue in a hundred thousand flags, to be distributed to onlookers along the route.

When the presidential parties arrive at the reception stand in Post Square, at approximately 4:30 p.m., Edgar Morris, general chairman of the citizens committee preparing Dutra's welcome, will introduce District Commissioners' Chairman John Russell Young to the visiting dignitary.

Young will present a key to the city to President Dutra. Both President Truman and President Dutra are expected to make short addresses before the official party moves on to the Blair House.

State Dinner at Carlton

At 8 p. m., President and Mrs. Truman and President Dutra will drive to the Carlton Hotel, where a state dinner in honor of the Brazilian President is to be given.

The weatherman, who predicts a partly cloudy, rather warm day today, warns that there is some chance of showers this afternoon. However, he forecast that the showers probably would be over before the hour of the official reception.

From the moment of his arrival today until he leaves by train for New York on Saturday at 4:10 p. m., President Dutra will have a busy schedule—a speech to a joint session of Congress, three receptions, two formal dinners and as many luncheons, and a visit to the Arlington National Cemetery.

For the gray-haired, impassive Brazilian leader, it should be no hardship. During his years of service in the Brazilian army, he used to be on the post by 5 in the morning, while his brother officers did not arrive until 6.

Of slightly more than medium height (5 feet 8 inches tall), President Dutra is a deliberate, slow speaker. As President of his country, Dutra has shown flashes of humor in his press interviews—and a deep-rooted aversion to making speeches.

Negro Voting Rights Upheld

Richmond, Va., May 17 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals today upheld a district court opinion allowing Negroes to vote in South Carolina Democratic primaries.

In an opinion written by Senior Judge John J. Parker, the Appellate Court confirmed an opinion by Federal Judge J. Waties Waring, of the Charleston, S. C., District Court. Judges Maurice A. Soper and Armistead M. Dobie concurred in Judge Parker's opinion.

Judge Waring, in a bristling opinion, had held that certain rules set up by the Democratic Party in South Carolina to determine the qualifications of members are designed solely to exclude Negro voters from the primaries.

Party officials argued that the Democratic Party in South Carolina had the right to limit its membership to those in sympathy with its aims.

Nebraska Votes Rent Control End

Lincoln, Nebr., May 17 (AP).—The Nebraska Legislature today voted to end rent controls in Nebraska by November 1.

The vote was 23 to 13, with seven Senators not voting.

In the event the Governor vetoes the bill, local communities could discontinue rent control by adoption of a resolution by the city council, which would then have to be approved by the Governor and certified to the Federal Housing Expediter.

Hyderabad Debate Put Off

Javits Cites Middle Income Housing Needs

By the United Press

Housing needs of middle-income families as well of those of low-income groups were stressed yesterday as the national public housing conference opened its 18th annual meeting.

Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.), estimated there are 15,500,000 middle-income families in the nation whose annual earnings range between $2500 and $4000 a year. These people, he said, have been priced out of the market in both buying and renting houses.

The same view was taken by Representative John A. Carroll (D., Col.) he said "public housing and slum clearance are vitally necessary, but legislation in this field will not meet the needs of the average white-collar and blue-collar wage earner who earns too much to be admitted to a public housing project and not enough to buy or rent a decent home at present price levels."

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan urged the clearing of rural slums which he described as serious as those of cities.

Others who spoke in support of pending legislation to provide 810,000 public housing units in six years were Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., of Baltimore; Representative Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.), Representative Albert Raines (D., Ala.), Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.), and Lawrence M. Cox, president of the National Association of Housing Officials.

Wallgren Bid Withdrawn

cans on the Armed Services Committee in March to block Wallgren's nomination by a 7-to-6 vote. The committee refused to let the nomination go to the Senate floor for a vote of the full membership.

In an exchange of letters yesterday the President said he agreed with Wallgren that the nomination would have been confirmed if his name had been allowed to go before the full Senate.

"I want you to know that my faith in you is undiminished," Mr. Truman told Wallgren, former Washington State Governor and his one-time associate in the Senate.

Wallgren told Mr. Truman that his natural inclination was to fight the matter out to a finish.

"Nevertheless," he wrote, "I am convinced that even though we were to go on and win this battle, the evident political opposition to my appointment would work to the detriment of the national security.

"The interest of national security requires total support of the Congress, all Government agencies, industry, business, agriculture and labor. Without full confidence and cooperation, and if impeded by politics, the National Security Resources Board cannot adequately perform its tremendous and vital mobilization planning assignment."

Shortly after Mr. Truman sent Wallgren's nomination to the Senate February 7, Senator Cain (R., Wash.) attacked the appointment and criticized Wallgren's capacity for the assignment. In addition to petent for the post, Cain charged that as governor he had been "soft" that as Governor he had been "soft" toward Communists, Wallgren denied the charges.

In tabling the nomination, the Armed Services Committee said that in its hearings it found no evidence reflecting on Wallgren's loyalty, nor any evidence that he was lacking in integrity. But a majority of the committee decided he ismply lacked the necessary economic and industrial experience for the planning post.

Cost of Feeding Three Goes Up 16 Cents in Month

Did you notice that your food cost you 16 cents more in March than it did in February?

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday reported that the Family Market Basket—the cost of feeding a family of three persons—went up from an annual rate of $638 in February to $644 the following month.

It was the first increase BAE had noted in the cost of food since prices started dropping last July.

The all-time high was last July, when the annual cost of feeding three persons reached $708. In other words, the average cost per person for food has dropped $1.50 a month since last July.

The farmers got 50 cents out of each dollar spent for food, the report showed. That is the lowest recorded since May, 1943.

Nations Controlling Ruhr Meet Friday on Authority's Setup

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

First steps to set in motion the International Authority for the Ruhr, created by the Western Powers over vigorous Soviet protests, will be launched Friday in London, it was announced yesterday.

Delegates from the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg will meet to prepare administrative groundwork for the Authority, which is to determaine the outlets for the German Ruhr's coal, coke and steel production.

While officials here said it is only coincidental that this action will come three days before the May 23 Paris conferenc of Big Four Forign Ministers, it is likely to point up long-standing Russian demands for four-power control of the Ruhr's industrial output.

Paris Argument Expected

Control of the Ruhr is almost certain to be a key issue at the Paris conference, as it has been at similar meetings in the past.

While officials here declined to indicate what their present position is on this question, in the past the United States, Britain and France have strongly resisted any Russian demands for a voice in control of the Ruhr, on grounds that Russia has taken unilateral action on German industry under its domination.

Located in the sector of Germany under Polish administration is the highly industrialized area of Silesia, while within the Soviet zone of Germany (Secretary of State George C. Marshall estimated in 1947) are 130 German industrial plants under complete Russian control, providing Russia with 500 million dolars worth of goods a year.

The Ruhr Authority has been created under an agreement drafted in London last December 28, and approved here in April when the foreign ministers gathered for the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty.

The State Department announced that Wayne G. Jaskson, special assistant to the director of the Office of European Affairs, will be acting United States representative at the London meeting this week. A permanent representative is expected to be named after the United States member of the three-power Allied High Commission for Germany is selected.

Germany will be represented on the Ruhr Authority when a West German republic is formed, and will have three votes, the same number as the United States, Britain and France. The Benelux countries have one vote each, and most authority decisions will require eight affirmative votes.

3 Ex-Commissioners Call on Present Ones

Three former District Commissioners paid a social call on the current Board of Commissioners yesterday during their semi-weekly session.

The guests were Louis Brownlow, who was on the board in 1917; Oliver Peck Newman, who was on in 1913, and Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, who was Engineer Commissioner during three different periods here.

SPEAKING OF Furniture
By JUDY MARTIN

IN LIVING ROOM

Fifty years ago the living room was a living room by name only. Today it's a happy combination of the front parlor, drawing room, library, music room and often the game room.

With so much activity taking place in this most important room, careful consideration should be taken with the arrangement of the furniture.

The first step in planning is to list the activities that the room has to support; entertainment, refreshments, conversation, relaxation, reading, radio, television and studying. This seems like a tall order, but it's easily filled.

The second step is to decide where to place the various centers of interest. The reading and radio center of interest may be grouped together . . . the same thing applies to entertainment and conversation.

Now that you have everything planned, buy your furniture to fit these centers of interest. The many new styles of furniture now on the market make shopping a pleasure and your "living" room more attractive and comfortable.

If furniture arrangement is somewhat of a problem (and it often is) call on us for suggestions.

Libya Independence Voted Down by U.N.

Flushing, N. Y., May 17.—The United Nations Assembly tonight voted down a demand for immediate independence of all formerly Italian Libya.

The vote on an Iraqi proposal for Libyan independence was 27 against and 23 for. This was the first ballot on a long series of proposals for disposing of the former Italian colonies.

The voting began after a day and night of final debate, and the Assembly was expected to adjourn its spring session after deciding the colonies question.

The United States and Britain emphatically denied Slav and Arab charges that he Western powers were by-passing the U. N. on a plan for disposal of the colonies.

Russian Delegate Jacob Malik had charged the U. S. and Britain were systematically undermining efforts of the Council of Foreign Ministers and had forced Italy to accept their plan.

"This debate," Malik said, "has proved that the United States and the United Kingdom did not abandon their plans on these territories for purposes of exploiting them for their own interests and most of all for strategic military purposes."

U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin retorted that the Soviet delegate's charges were "getting reckless."

Austin said of the plan worked out between British Foregin Secretary Ernest Bevin and Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza, and adopted by the U. N.'s Political Committee:

"I do not pretend that the resolution approved by the committee corresponds fully with the views of the United States delegation, "nor does it represent a perfect solution. But it does contain elements of an answer which we urge upon the Assembly as the most practicable solution in the circumstances."

The colonial partition plan would divide Libya for 10 years, under U. N. trusteeship, into three parts, with Britain administering Cyrenaica and France the Fezzan. Britain also would continue her interim administration of Tripolitania until 1951, when it would be given over to Italian trusteeship. In Tripolitania, Britain would be assisted in the two-year interim period by an advisory council comprising Turkey, France, Italy, the United States, Britain, and a representative of the native population.

Urges Speed

Pact Views Maintained By Connally

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) made what looked like a surprise move to delay Senate action on the North Atlantic Pact yesterday, but later explained it was all a misunderstanding.

He issued a statement last night saying he wanted Senate consideration of the treaty "as soon as the legislative leaders determine it can be brought before the Senate."

Earlier he had been understood to suggest that the Senate delay action and "allow time for the treaty to soak in with the people."

This surprised State Department and other officials because Connally as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had previously been talking of getting action before July 1 on the security pact and the accompanying bill for $1,130,000,000 in arms for Europe.

Connally yesterday held an informal chat with Senator Lucas of Illinois, Democratic leader, with an Associated Press reporter taking part.

The reporter caught the conversation between Connally and Lucas as follows:

Connally asked Lucas if the administration bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley labor law could be called up before the treaty, because:

"That would give the treaty time for the treaty to soak in with the people. I'd like to see the treaty put off a while. We (members of the Foreign Relations Committee) need a rest."

(The committee has been holding hearings on the treaty, which is designed to bulwark western Europe against Communism.)

Lucas did not give a decision then, but told Connally he would discuss the matter with him later.

Connally repeated to the reporter what he had said earlier—that it might be well to let the arms-for-Europe program "simmer," while watching the progress of the Big Four foreign ministers meeting in Paris May 23.

This meeting, called as part of an agreement by which Russia lifted its blockade of Berlin, is scheduled to tackle the thorny problem of Germany's future.

Later Connally issued a statement saying:

"I'm not in control of the order in which the legislative program will be taken up by the Senate. I am of course desirous that the North Atlantic Pact be considered as soon as the legislative leaders determine it can be brought before the Senate.

"The reciprocal trades agreement is the pending business, but on account of the temporary illness of Senator George (D., Ga.), I merely inquired of Senator Lucas if there will be any change in the order in which legislation will be taken up. He replied he would talk to me later about it.

"I had been told that ratification of the treaty would not be considered until the reciprocal trade bill was out of the way and then there will be a question of whether other domestic legislation will be taken up or the treaty."

France Fights Huge Deficit

Paris, May 17 (AP).—Premier Henri Queuille's cabinet will try to erase a 250-million-dollar deficit in the French budget largely by economies, a government spokesman said today.

The cabinet wrestled with the deficit as Parliament returned from vacation in an atmosphere of labor and political unrest.

Defense Minister Paul Ramadier prestned an overhauled budget calling for 840 million dollars for the army, navy and air force—approximately 25 per cent over last year. The budget reflects the increasing costs of the fight with Indo-Chinese Nationalists.

1000 Warriors Riot in Tripoli

Tripoli, May 17 (U.P.).—More than 1000 fierce tribal horsemen galloped through the town of Azizia today in a new demonstration against a United Nations proposal to make Tripolitania an Italian trusteeship.

No one was injured at Azizia, but police here announced that 41 persons had been hurt in rioting which accompanied the five-day anti-Italian campaign in this northwest Libyan province.

British residents as well as Italians in Libya have been the target of many of the demonstrations because Britain is backing the trusteeship plan devised by Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza.

Libyan leaders are demanding complete independence for this African territory which was the keystone of Italy's prewar empire.

Air Force Renews Probe

Because new facts have come up, the Air Force said yesterday it is asking that a further check be made into the activities of Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell.

He has been under military investigation after complaints over alleged illegal dealings in coffee while he was attache of the United States Embassy in London.

The Air Force declined to discuss the new information.

An investigation has been under way in Wiesbaden, Germany, by Maj. Gen. Edwin B. Lyon to see whether evidence warrants a court-martial.

John E. Hughes, Bissell's attorney, said that Lyon, after hearing many witnesses in Germany and England, reported on April 23 to Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon, U. S. Air Force commander in Europe, that there was no evidence to sustain the charges.

Hughes said Lyon recommended that the charges be dismissed and Bissell be completely exonerated. But the lawyer said high U. S. Air Force oficers here were demanding further investigations.

Clay Lionized Here on Return From Berlin

Russia, lifted the blockade of Berlin, and he thought that this action indicated a desire on Russia's part for cooperation for at least a limited period. He thought that the West ought to take advantage of this.

Bu it would be well to keep in mind, he said, that the struggle between democracy and Communism may last for "many, many years."

He said that the presence of American occupation troops in Germany had allayed fear in Europe, and he said these troops should be kept there until the continent has been stablized.

He mentioned the occupation troops, the airlift, the Marshall Plan and the North Atlantic Pact, and said:

"There is no longer the fear in Europe which certainly existed two years ago."

There was fear, he said, among the 100,000 to 200,000 Germans who are serving as police under the Russians in Eastern Germany, of younger men who were indoctriminated with the Nazi philosophy.

"They are afraid of the German people," he said.

General Clay, until recently American military governor of Germany, looked thin and overworked. His eyes lighted up as he talked of retiring from the Army on June 1 and going cat-fishing. He scoffed at the talk of his running for Governor of his native Georgia.

It was in his House speech that he talked of the outlook for true democracy in Germany.

He told how for two years he and the British and French commanders had tried to work with the Russians and carry out the four-power government of Germany that was set up at Yalta and Potsdam. Aiming at Russia, he said:

"We failed because we found that one of the four powers had but two objectives in Germany: One was to exact the maximum in reparations, and the other was to establish the type of government which could be controlled or at least exploited by a police state."

The three Western powers, he said, had to go it alone. Once the North Atlantic Security Pact was signed, he said, these powers agreed to give the German people an opportunity to earn their right to return to the comity of nations. A democratic constitution for Germany followed.

"The Germans," he continued, "have cast their die for a government which stands for the dignity of man as an individual.

"It is impossible to forget, and it is difficult to forgive. We all remember that Germany started the aggressive war which has brought the world to the conditions which we have seen during the past four years. One has only to revisit Buchenwald and Dachau to remember the extreme cruelty of the Nazi regime.

"It is dificult, however, for us living here in this free country to realize the moral deterioration of a people who come under a dictatorship, under a secret police, when one's next-door neighbor may indeed be an informer of one's daily activities.

"A people who have been subject to such a regime cannot be restored to democracy overnight nor by oppression. They can be led back to democracy. Today they need the helping hand of the freedom-loving democratic people of the world.

"I saw in Berlin the spirit and soul of a people reborn. Two and one-half million Germans had a second opportunity, and few people in this world have a second opportunity to choose freedom They had forgone their first opportunity; they did not forgo their second opportunity.

"Men, women and children in that city took their stand, and they lived through a cold and hard winter with steadfast spirit. Some of that spirit has spread throughout Germany; and it may, indeed, be the spirit that lights a flame for freedom in Germany that may grow with the years."

He said that the only hope for a peaceful and stable Europe lay in encouragement of that flame.

Efforts must be made, he said, to develop a Germany which thinks not only of Germany but sees itself as part of a new European order devoted to a common economic effort and a common love for freedom.

Addressing the Senate, Gen. Clay said that out of the failure of four-power government in Germany "came our greatest success."

"In that failure," he said, "we realized that the free nations of the world had to be given support and encouragement so that they could again raise their heads and prevent the inroads then being made by forces which believe in the rights of a state being superior to the basic rights of the individual."

The climax in this struggle came, he said, with the Marshall Plan and with the prospect that Germany would be included in that plan.

It was primarily to retard European recovery, and to force the Allied powers from Berlin, he said, that Russia clamped on her blockade of the German capital. The Russians, he said, wanted to recreate the conditions of fear which are the only conditions under which a police state can be created.

On their arrival aboard the Berlin plane yesterday morning, General Clay and Mrs. Clay were greeted at the airport by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and other high-ranking officials of the armed services. Troops of all the services were lined up as an honor guard, and artillery pieces fired a 17-gun salute.

When the day was over, Mrs. Clay had a decoration as well as her illustrious husband. She was presented with a Certificate of Appreciation by Acting Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray for her "courageous example" in remaining at the side of her husband in occupied Germany during 1946-49.

Pilot Is Honored For Organizing 'Candy to Berlin'

Lieut. Gail S. Halvorsen of Garland, Utah, who organized "Operation Little Vittles" to fly candy to Berlin children, was handed a $500 award yesterday for humanitarian self sacrifice.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, presented the award, originated in 1927 in memory of Lieut. William H. Cheney, killed in an airplane crash at Foggia, Italy, in 1918.

Halvorsen began dropping candy tied to handkerchief parachutes last July.

Fraulein, 23, Tells of Spying For Soviet

Munich, May 17 (U.P.).—A Nazi-trained German girl today confessed she had been a Soviet spy in Germany. She said she had sent the Russians a report on German scientists engaged in top-secret research in the United States.

Gertraud Mittenentzwei, 23, told a military court she had not dared tell United States authorities about her activities because "there are many Russian agents in the United States Counter Intelligence Corps and the offices of military government. I was afraid to trust anyone."

She said she was one of a number of former members of a Nazi girls' organization drafted for spy work by Russians in the Soviet zone.

Fraulein Mittenentzwei said she worked for Soviet intelligence in eastern Germany for six months and then was sent into the United States zone with orders to report "anything of interest."

She wept as she told the court "I was afraid they would send me or my relatives to Siberia unless I did as they said."

Gertraud said she managed to get a job in the military government document center here. Thus, she said, she was able to get information about what is called "the paper clip project" (the transfer of German scientists to America), American troop movements in Germany and other restricted matters.

Fraulein Mittenentzwei, who said she was going to have a baby next month, was arrested last December. A high official of the Counter Intelligence Corps in Frankfurt said of Gertraud's statement: "I wouldn't dignify it with a comment."

East Europe Nations Deny Russia Is Exploiting Them

Geneva, Switzerland, May 17 (AP).—Representatives of eastern European nations rose one by one in the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe today and denied their homelands were being exploited by Soviet Russia.

They said everything is improving under what the Romanian delegate called "this new type of relationship" with Russia. A Hungarian said things are so much better in Hungary that food parcels are now being sent to help out western Europe.

The delegates were answering a speech yesterday by Paul R. Porter, United States delegate. Porter said the Soviet Union was holding a strong hand on the economic development of its neighbors and exploiting them to the point of impoverishment.

The Bulgarian delegate said the peasants of his country would "laugh heartily at Mr. Porter's statement that deliveries of Soviet goods were of inferior quality."

Even the Yugoslav delegate, Milan Ristic, said he was "extremely astonished" at the U. S. statement. Without mentioning the large reduction in trade between the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia because of Marshal Tito's differences with the Cominform, he said:

"The Federated People's Republic of Yugoslavia is a free and independent state. We could not possibly allow capitalistic states to play the part of our defenders since they have been practicing discrimination against our republic and the other eastern states."

Judge Orders Bond Of Eisler Forfeited

By The Associated Press

A Federal judge yesterday ordered the forfeiture of $20,000 in bonds posted by Gerhart Eisler.

A stay-in-jail bench warrant for the arrest of the fugitive Communist leader if and when he is extradited from England also was issued by United States District Judge James W. Morris.

Judge Morris signed orders declaring that Eisler, who skipped the country May 6 as a stowaway on the Polish liner Batony, is ineligible for further freedom on bail while his appeals are pending in two criminal cases here.

The $20,000 bond had been posted by the Civil Rights Congress, an alleged Communist front organization. An additional $3500 bond, posted in New York in connection with a deportation case against Eisler, was not affected by yesterday's action.

Under Federal Eyes

The New York World-Telegram said meanwhile that Eisler stowed away in New York harbor under the eyes of FBI agents.

The newspaper said the Federal men were not to blame for Eisler's escape "because they were not looking for him." Instead, it said, they were keeping a watch to see that Valentine A. Gubitchev, 32, a Russian former employe of the United Nations, did not slip aboard the Batory.

Gubitchev is free on $100,000 bail on espionage conspiracy charges, facing trial in New York with Judith Coplon, former Justice Department analyst, who is now on trial alone here.

In London, the American Embassy retained a British lawyer, F. Graham Maw, to present its formal demand for Eisler's extradition when the case comes up in old Bow Street Court there next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Eisler was cooling his heels in 130-year-old Brixton Prison in London while British authorities studied a digest of the Polish government's protest over the arrest of the dumpy, bespectacled little fugitive.

Seized by Scotland Yard detectives when the Batory dropped anchor off Southampton last Saturday, Eisler was denied bail at his arraignment in London Monday.

Foundation Control Issue

in loyalty investigations are far from satisfactory, and he said that in non-secret work he did not believe it would be wise to deny federal support to Communist sympathizers. Security investigatoins should be confined, he said, to those areas where real questions of security are involved.

Protection Pledged.

Dr. Bronk, who is also president of Johns Hopkins University, told the committee the council would adopt procedures leading to better screening of fellowship applicants, although he opposed FBI checks.

The National Research Council, a private organization chartered by Congress, has been entrusted by the AEC with the task of selecting recipients of the commission's five-million-dollar-a-year fellowship program.

The council, he said, recommended dropping the plan for FBI loyalty investigation of fellowship students because members felt this would be "encouraging a line of procedure" which might carry over to the National Science Foundation.

FBI Clearance Unwanted

The Council, Dr. Bronk said, did not want to be a party to endorsing anything which might lead to FBI clearance of persons who are to receive benefits under the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Alan Gregg, director of the medical science division of the Rockefeller Foundation and chairman of the AEC committee on biology and medicine, was the committee's second witness.

Gregg pointed out that there was no question of security involved in the fellowships since the students were not working on secret projects. Knowledge that FBI loyalty checks were to be made, he said, would deter "sensitive" young scientists whose reaction would be that it was no crime to belong to the Communist Party.

He said that he opposed setting up this kind of "means test," and he told of his own adverse reaction to being asked to give his fingerprints and any previous names he had used to the U. S. Public Health Service.

Sarcastically he remarked he had been known as "Pinkie" in college and that his wife called him "the boy traveler," cognomens which might be taken seriously in a loyalty check, he said.

Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) stressed the point that while young men educated at public expense at West Point and Annapolis were required to serve five years in the armed forces there is no such requirement for AEC fellows. They receive education, he pointed out, at Government expense but are not required to make any return for it.

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

New York's special grand jury probing Red activities in the United States has called Mrs. Brunhilde Eisler, wife of the Communist leader now held in England; and two officials of the Gdynia-America Line, which owns the liner Batory on which Eisler fled this country. The latter are Roman Kutylowski, president of the line; and Czeslaw Grzelak, vice president. They are scheduled to appear some time today

Reds Ordered Eisler Flight, Sen. Mundt Tells Grand Jury

New York, May 17 (AP).—Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) said today he believed the Kremlin ordered Gerhart Eisler to escape from this country, and sent someone to take his place.

Mundt appeared before a special Federal grand jury investigating subversive activities. He told reporters:

"We know Eisler has been one of the key Communists used by Moscow to direct its activities in this country. I believe the Kremlin ordered Eisler to escape.

Eisler Replacement

"They don't leave the most important beat in the world unguarded. The Russians undoubtedly sent someone to take Eisler's place."

Mundt is former acting head of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

He said the Russians "have a No. 1 guy in this country who is not a diplomatic official, who is the real head of the Communists. We should find that fellow."

Mundt also claimed that "whoever is head of espionage in this country gives orders to the first secretary of the Russian Embassy."

Close Alliance Suggested

Mundt said he suggested a close alliance between the New York grand jury, the FBI, the House Un-American Activities Committee and the Senate Subcommittee on Immigration.

Thus, he said, the jury could help find out "who is masterminding the present activities of the Communists in the Federal Government."

Also appearing before the grand jury was Paul Crouch, a Miami, Fla., newspaper employe.

Crouch, author of articles in the Miami Daily News, said he did not want to "discuss anything I might be questioned about inside." He appeared under a Department of Justice subpena.

Thomas J. Donegan, special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, said it was "just a coincidence" that Mundt and Crouch appeared the same day.

Love Not Coplon Case Issue, Judge Avers

Love is not the issue in the Judith Coplon case and "you can't make it an issue," Judge Albert L. Reeves told the defense yesterday in the District Court espionage trial.

Judge Reeves' pronouncement—if it sticks—may be written down as perhaps his most important in the case to date, for the major defense thus far presented is that Miss Coplon was seeing the Russian Valentin Gubitchev not as a spy but as a girl in love or falling in love.

Archibald Palmer, volcanic little defense attorney, objected in a bitter outcry to the jurist's declaration.

Occasion of Interchange

The interchange came as Palmer was questioning FBI Special Agent John P. Daley about his shadowing of Miss Coplon and Gubitchev on the night of March 4 when they were arrested in New York.

"If two people are in love," Palmer said, "and want to talk to each other about sweet nothings or whatever it is they talk about, they are more likely to walk in the quiet eddy of 15th street rather than the turbulent stream of 14th street, aren't they?"

Judge Reeves broke in, saying he wanted to get on to the issues in the case.

• "The issues," Palmer boomed, "are whether this man was in love with the girl, or . . ."

I'm telling you," the jurist cut in, shaking his finger and leaning over the bench, "that's not the issue and you can't make it the issue."

At a bench conference called by Judge Reeves at the end of the explosive morning session, Palmer told the judge that "the big issue is why Gubitchev got there"—to the meetings with Miss Coplon in New York. "I interpret it as being a proper thing and I'll prove it," he exclaimed.

Yesterday was Miss Coplon's twenty-eighth birthday, but just another day in the trial in which she is charged with taking and copying Government documents with intent to aid a foreign power while she was employed as a political analyst in the Department of Justice.

She and Gubitchev, at the time of his arrest a Soviet U. N. engineer, are charged with conspiracy to commit espionage in a separate indictment in New York

"Did you ever hear whether our Government has inside the U. N. Soviet delegation any counterspies?" Palmer asked witness Daley.

"Your Honor," Daley said, turning to Judge Reeves, "I think that is confidential information and under Department Order 3229 I don't feel I have to answer it."

The judge agreed. A little later Palmer and Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., were in a vehement argument over Palmer's implications that Gubitchev was an American counter-spy sent to entrap Miss Coplon.

Reds Nearly Complete Ring About Shanghai, Drive to Within 225 Mi. of Nationalist Capital

By The Associated Press

Chinese Communist armies all but encircled Shanghai Tuesday, swept to within 87 miles of the southeast port of Foochou and were reported but 225 miles from Canton, the refugee capital.

The southbound Red juggernauts appeared to be virtually unopposed. Communist armies simply walked into the three big cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang, grouped on the Yangtze in central China.

Military observers in Canton declared there was little but "mountains and space" between that south China city and a Red column which has slashed 300 miles south of the Yangtze.

Only on the Shanghai front did the Nationalists appear to be putting up a battle. And even the garrison admitted the Reds were making encircling moves that put the city in imminent peril.

A communique said the Reds had reached Chwansha, 12 miles east of Shanghai's waterfront. This meant they held lines about three-fourths of the way around China's greatest city

The Communists also reached the outskirts of Pootung, the sprawling industrial district across the Whangpoo River from Shanghai.

Pressure on Shanghai lessened on the south and north. Here, before Lungwha Airport on the south and the fortress of Woosung on the north, the Nationalists made a determined stand.

The Nationalists claimed a big victory before Woosung and on one sector 10 miles northwest of Shanghai.

It appeared that with the help of warplanes still based at Shanghai the Reds' drive from the west had been checked, at least for the moment.

Ford Plan to Limit Strike Turned Down

Detroit, May 17 (AP).—A Ford proposal that would have sent all but 5000 of the company's 102,000 strike-idle employes back to work within a few days was turned down today by the CIO United Auto Workers.

Ford suggested that the union call off its strike in all the sprawling units of the company's key Rouge plant except the "B" building. It also said the Lincoln-Mercury plant here could remain strike-bound.

The "B" building, otherwise known as the Dearborn assembly plant, and the Lincoln-Mercury factory are the only units in the Nation-wide Ford industrial system directly involved in the UAW's charge of a production speed-up. They employe 5000 men between them.

Ford made the proposal as today's negotiating session got under way. The union rejected it as "fantastic." UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey said all Ford workers will "stand solidly together in this strike."

The company's proposal was made by John S. Bugas, vice president in charge of industrial relations and head of Ford's negotiators.

Union acceptance of the proposal, Bugas said, would have meant the immediate recall of 72,000 workers in the Detroit area and the call-back of 25,000 others in Ford assembly plants across the Nation as soon as parts production could have been resumed.

Also, he added, supplier firms and Ford dealers which have laid off countless other thousands could have called thier employes back.

Federal mediators meanwhile worked behind the scenes to determine whether they should actively intervene in the 13-day Ford strike.

Syndicates Serving 1400 Papers Struck

New York, May 17 (AP).—Employes of four affiliates of North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc., serving an estimated 1,400 newspapers, struck last night in a dispute over wages and other demands.

Affiliates of the parent company are Bell Syndicate, Inc., Associated Newspapers, Inc., Consolidated News Features, Inc., and Nana, Inc. The agencies distribute cartoons and features, including columns by Drew Pearson, Dorothy Thompson, Dorothy Dix and Billy Rose.

Local guild said it was demanding a union shop contract, severance pay, job classification, and a $110 minimum weekly wage for deskmen with other minimums for other types of employes. Present wages average $65 weekly for deskmen, the guild said.

Thomas A. Brennan, attorney for the syndicate, said the walkout came after the syndicate "refused to yield on the guild demand on the union shop and checkoff, and the guild limitation on the management right to determine the number of the force."

Guild spokesmen said guild units in Washington, D. C., San Francisco and Chicago would picket the syndicate's offices in those cities.

Baltimore 'Phone Company Asks NLRB Ruling on Union

Baltimore, May 17 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore has asked the National Relations Board to determine if the Communications Workers of America, CIO, may continue as a collective bargaining unit.

The company announced today it had withdrawn its recognition from the CWA because the union "refused to furnish proof" that the majority of its members approve of its recent affiliation with the CIO.

Similar petitions are on file at the fifth regional office of the NLRB from the Richmond and Washington, D. C., divisions of the Bell System, of which the C. & P. of Baltimore also is a part, and from the Western Electric Plant at Baltimore.

President Joseph A. Bierne of the CWA announced May 6 that union members had voted in a national referendum to hook up with the CIO.

Brazilian Visitor

Washington has put on a festive air in preparation for the arrival this afternoon of President Eurico Gaspar Dutra of Brazil. This city has witnessed many visits of foreign dignitaries, but this is something special, and calls for the best celebration that can be mobilized. President Dutra is the representative of the closest friend of the United States in this hemisphere, a friend that has stood loyally beside this country in war and peace. President Dutra himself, as we noted the other day, is a remarkable man because of his yeoman work for constitutional processes. In addition to General Dutra and his aides, the party also will include Foreign Minister Raul Fernandes and Senhora Fernandes. Senhor Fernandes is the grand old man of Brazilian diplomacy, a consistent upholder of international morality, and his presence is an extra reason for a hearty welcome.

Washingtonians, we are sure, will do their part to make the visit of President Dutra and his associates enjoyable and memorable. Both the Federal and District Governments are cooperating by releasing employes in time for them to be on hand for the parade, which starts from the airport soon after 4 p. m. Schools can achieve an instructive exercise in inter-Americanism by encouraging their students to attend. It will be difficult to match the welcome the Brazilians accorded President Truman at Rio de Janeiro in 1947, but Washington certainly can try.

Putting Money To Work

The Federal Reserve Board is acting one way while the President goes on talking another. Its action last Friday was the fifth in a row intended to counteract the deflationary turn in the economic situation. All of them are aimed at thawing out bank credit. After reducing stock market margins, advancing installment credit terms twice, and lowering bank reserve requirements, the FRB has reduced margin requirements on new stock subscriptions. The present level is 50 per cent; now it will be 25 per cent, with a provision for increasing cash payment by another 25 per cent within nine months.

To support industrial activity at high levels and meet the needs of a growing population a steady and abundant flow of investment capital is essential to expand, replace and improve production facilities. During the postwar period a preponderant proportion of such capital has been supplied by business corporations from borrowing, retained earnings, past and current, and depreciation reserves. Too small a part has been supplied from equity capital. During the three years from 1946 to 1948 inclusive, for example, stock issues have provided only 3.7 billion dollars, a mere 4½ per cent, of the 82.2 billions of capital invested in corporate business.

This record sharply underlines the importance of encouraging the public to put its savings into equity issues. The Federal Reserve Board has accordingly taken a step in the right direction by reducing margin requirements on new stock subscriptions. Although the demand for capital for expansion purposes is not so pressing in case of manufacturing industries as it was a short time ago, public utilities, such as gas and electric companies, anticipate substantial increases in capital outlays to make up for lost time and meet the needs of community growth. They, in particular, will benefit from the action of the Federal Reserve Board in making it easier for them to obtain equity capital through sales of stock.

This sign of what the Federal Reserve Board thinks of the economic situation needs to be pondered in the White House.

Illinois Challenge

It was disturbing to see what little attention was given to the Illinois press-payroll scandal even in Illinois itself when the story was first published on April 14 by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. With notable exceptions, of which the Decatur Herald and Review is one that has come to our attention, even the untainted papers in the State kept quiet about the conduct of their fellows. But the period of silence is now largely over. And it is gratifying not only that the news is being circulated but that more and more newspapers are taking up the challenge editorially. If we may be invidious, the Milwaukee Journal is a conspicuous example of editorial heart-searching. These newspapers recognize that the failure of 51 Illinois journalists to keep their own skirts clean is not just their own affair; it is a challenge to the reputation of the entire American press.

On this point the comment of Editor and Publisher, trade paper of the newspaper business, is crisply exact: "The incident cannot be ignored, for by doing so it is tacitly condoned. No man can serve two masters. And newspapermen cannot serve their readers honestly and also draw from the well of public funds. The American press must be firm on this issue if it wishes to maintain the respect of the people."

To Recapitulate

With enactment of a 2 per cent sales tax for the District now a certainty, it is well to look back at the road over which we have traveled to this point in local revenue legislation. Ten years ago, when the need for additional revenue became acute, the community seemed to favor raising it by means of an income tax. The Washington Post applauded that view. The income tax, we felt, was the fairest means of distributing the burden of defraying the local government's additional expenses. The kind of income tax which Congress passed, however, was so outrageously unfair to the permanent local residents that it became a stench in the nostrils of the community.

For many years this newspaper repeatedly urged correction of that blunder. We called the top-sided income tax a tax on disfranchisement because it was designed to apply to all persons domiciled in the District who have no chance to vote, while exempting other local residents retaining their legal domicile elsewhere. Year after year efforts to end this rank discrimination failed. Some changes were ultimately made in the law, but its basic unfairness remained. Two years ago, after the House had again refused to accept an income tax that could meet the test of fairness, we concluded that that District could not wait forever for Congress to correct this error, and we threw our influence behind enactment of the sales tax.

In principle we continue to favor the income tax over the sales tax. Even in this city, where a large transient population gives the sales tax a special appeal, the income tax seems preferable. But the District is confronted by a condition and not a theory. Its need for more revenue can no longer be denied, and the only feasible means of getting that revenue (in the absence of an income tax applying to all residents alike) is the sales tax. In discussing the sales tax we have repeatedly recognized this fact. We have called the sales tax a "desperate resort" while at the same time recognizing the necessity of using it to save the city from bankruptcy either in its municipal services or in its finances. Congress has now at last accepted this view in spite of determined efforts in both the House and the Senate to obscure the facts.

Frankly, we suspect that most of the people who are beefing about The Washington Post's support of the sales tax have never paid the local income tax. In any event, they have closed their eyes to irrefragable fiscal facts. The sales tax will at least have the virtue of restoring the city's finances to a sound basis. Our hope is that Congress will now pass the home-rule bill, so that an elected city council can revamp our entire local tax structure in keeping with the wishes of the people.

Atomic Education

An excellent argument for the speedy establishment of a National Science Foundation is to be found in the current congressional concern over the fellowships financed by the Atomic Energy Commission. Actually there is only a remote connection between the secret work of the commission and the nonsecret pure research for which it acts as an indirect sponsor. This is a distinction, however, which is hard to make clear, and in the present case the commission's detractors have had a field day with their phony implication that the commission is playing fast and loose with security by supporting research done by Communists. The Atomic Energy Commission would be removed from the area of controversy and confusion if the fellowship program were placed where it belongs—under a National Science Foundation.

As a matter of fact, the AEC is in the business of supporting a broad range of scientific research principally by default. Several attempts to make the science foundation a going concern have died stillborn. It was imperative that something be done to augment the well of scientific knowledge that had languished since the war. In January, 1948, the AEC stepped in, under authority given it in the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, with a program of research fellowships to be administered by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. These fellowships relate only indirectly to the work of the Atomic Energy Commission; their main contribution is to build up a reservoir of young Americans trained in physics, chemistry, biology and the like.

The Smith bill passed by the Senate, and the companion Priest bill now before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, would authorize just such a program as part of the National Science Foundation. These bills are not all that might be desired in the way of science legislation, but they are a workable first step. The present furor emphasizes the necessity for ending the dalliance in the House. It is imperative to separate the vital, nonsecret field of scientific research from the technical work of the Atomic Energy Commission. The sooner this is done, the less inclination there will be for Congress to toy with the kind of political fetters on fellowship recipients that would frustrate the very freedom of inquiry we are trying to promote.

Wisdom Teeth

When Britain's Labor government launched its national health program last July, it took a number of calculated risks—and some miscalculated ones. Among the latter was the expected cost in the first nine months. This has turned out to be far above the estimate for all medical services, and particularly in the dental service. For dental care the government footed a nine-month bill over 2½ times the anticipated amount.

The rush to the dentist's chair in Britain is posing all manner of dilemmas. If the dentists try to take care of everyone who flocks in, they cannot do careful and painstaking work. But if they elect to turn people away instead of skimping, those who are left out are not likely to appreciate the principle involved. The government's dilemma is a financial one. The scale of fees drawn up last year has turned out to be extravagantly out of line. Dentists working under the health program are drawing down more money than ever before. The drain on the treasury is so great that the government has taken steps to stop it. It has been withholding half of income payments to dentists over $1600 a month pending study and renegotiation of the scale with representatives of the dental profession. Finally, the lure of high income has drawn so many dentists away from local welfare programs that the "priority" cases, such as expectant mothers and preschool children, are coming in last—which means they are neglected. The local authorities responsible for these programs cannot compete with the excessive salaries dentists can obtain in general practice.

British experience is a guidepost of danger that cannot be disregarded. Our situation is not so different that we could expect to be immune from some of the same consequences of introducing universal dental and medical care before we have supplied the means of taking care of the foreseeable flood of demand.

Victims Of Neglect

Within a period of not much more than a month 29 inmates of the Allen County (Ind.) Old People's Home have died. The attending, county-appointed physician, Dr. Noah Zehr, attributes this excessive mortality to nutritional starvation that has weakened the resistance of the aged inmates to germs and infections. He has tried to keep some of his patients alive by the use of vitamins but they are "very expensive" and can be bought only in limited quantities, as the home does not even have sufficient funds to provide proper food. Moreover, lack of trained personnel, appointments to key jobs being based on party affiliations, has been an aggravating factor.

The shocking conditions prevailing in this Indiana home for the aged are undoubtedly duplicated in varying degrees in public institutions throughout the country. For under the pressure of high prices and increasing demands on limited public facilities appropriations for the care of the aged, infirm, and destitute have failed to keep pace with the growing need. The result is unbalanced diets, scanty rations, overcrowding, and speedy extinction of those who are weakened by age or chronic afflictions.

There is no excuse for tolerance of such conditions in a country that has spent billions of dollars to provide food for the starving and undernourished people of other lands. Lack of funds is certainly not a valid reason for a failure to care for the indigent and helpless in our midst. What is lacking is public knowledge of the imperative nature of the need and organized community drives to obtain the money required to provide decent food and housing and proper care for the inmates of public and private institutions. By publicity on stories of neglect and maladministration, such as the Indiana scandal, public opinion throughout the country will, we believe, be aroused and our State and local Governments compelled to make more adequate provision for their helpless wards.

Fur Labeling

We have a good deal of sympathy with the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee's inquiry into the misleading labels on the basis of which furs are sold. Furs, to be sure, are not the only commodities on which an element of masquerade is employed. On so prosaic an item as olives, the practice seems to be to describe their dimensions in superlatives, whatever the actual size. But on furs the distortion is particularly blatant; garments made wholly of domestic materials are described as coming from exotic foreign animals. It is questionable whether this deception makes any real difference as to the quality of goods purchased, but we are surprised that irate customers have not before this protested the invasions of their gullibility. Imagine, for example, the embarrassment of the dowager who has just shown off her new creation festooned with Hungarian walrus only to learn that it is really Pennsylvania polecat!

A LINE OF VERSE

It shocked electric from the page:
Unreckoned sum of one and one,
And striking bone and cartilage
Flared, for an instant, like a sun.

The pines were suddep bluish-bright,
The mountains self-revealed, and then
The dark of thunder followed light,
I could not find that world again.

Happy Omen For Aging U.S.

By Malvina Lindsay

Grandma Moses

WASHINGTON'S recent capitulation to Grandma Moses, 88-year-old artist, was a good omen for the increasing proportion of Americans past 65. The way in which Grandma stole the show—in homage as well as attention—everywhere she went indicated that at last we as a people might be getting over our national obsession with teen-age glamour.

Also, significantly, the triumph in the Capital of this woman who only began to paint when she was 76, came at a time when Congress, industry, labor, taxpayers are asking: What's to be done with our old people—and when the talk is all of handouts instead of opportunity.

The response to the simple, genuine quality of Grandma Moses was as fine a tribute to the public as to her. The 600 guests at the annual dinner of the Women's National Press Club, where Grandma was given an achievement award, shed social veneer and official status and became bedrock human beings at their best as they acclaimed her publicly, and as many of them greeted her later showing the same tender response.

EVERYWHERE it was the same—at Mrs. Truman's tea at Blair House, at the art gallery where the Moses primitives are on exhibition, in the big modernistic lobby of the hotel where she stayed, in press conferences, on the train. Onlookers' faces softened and their eyes lightened as they saw the straight valiant little figure in black dress and bonnet standing with complete composure, or walking along briskly and cheerfully to perform the next of the many tasks life has demanded of her.

This was more than a response to drama or to sentimentality. True, here was the American success dream achieved belatedly—a girl longing to paint, waiting through years of a struggling, crowded life to do so. True also, here was a picturesque figure who could have stepped out of anyone's family album, been anyone's mother or grandmother. True also, Americans are often sentimental about old age—especially when it comes to helping it over a straw.

But the homage paid Grandma Moses went deeper. It was to a large degree admiration for a human being who had demonstrated how to live fully and grow old triumphantly. It was human delight that age 88 could be so active, independent, quick witted, attractive—could offer others such an appealing model to which to aspire. It was heart warming response in a hard-boiled world to the discovery of politeness, gentility, sensitive consideration for others.

"You have inspired me to try painting next year when I retire," a Government worker told Grandma at the art gallery. Of course I don't expect to equal you." "Indeed," said Grandma kindly, "you may excel me."

THE WAY in which Grandma Moses moved her "audience," including many of the Capital's foremost figures, had something in common with the effect of the prizewinning New York play, Death of a Salesman. People felt in her something that reached deeply into their own lives. They felt their own frustrations in her long-deferred ambition to paint. They felt their own sorrows in the many deaths she had sustained—five of her 10 children lost in infancy, a son who had taken great pride in her proposed visit to Washington, dying only a few weeks ago.

They felt she had known most of the dark valleys through which they had passed. They felt, as people do in the presence of an exquisite aged person, that she had not only grown wise with much living in this world but was near enough to the next one to be brushed by omniscience.

A Nation that has childishly feared growing older can take heart from Grandma Moses' triumph in the Capital City. For even if she had never painted a picture, those who had contact with her would have responded just as much to her personality. As she was escorted to take her place in the line for the head table at the Press Club dinner, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn turned and saw her behind him. Instantly he took both her hands in his. "Say," he exclaimed, "you can always stand ahead of me anywhere, any time. I love the way you look!" Then he turned to the person on the other side. "Who," he asked, "is that?"

Recognition Of Spain

If we exchanged diplomats with only those nations whose governments we approved of, we wouldn't have many ambassadors abroad. We certainly do not approve of the government in Moscow, but we do have an ambassador there. The very same arguments that were used to recognize the Communist government of Russia in the early 30s should be advanced for the recognition of the Spanish government in Madrid.

The Communist government of Russia went unrecognized for 19 years, but nevertheless was the de facto government. The Franco government has had de facto control of Spain for the last 12 years, and there are certainly no signs that it will not continue to have it for many more.

The de jure recognition of Spain by our Government and the inclusion of Spain in the United Nations would greatly enhance world unity and add great strength and impetus to the growing anti-Communist forces of the world.

"Atomic Fog"

It is disappointing to see a responsible newspaper print such an editorial as "Atomic Fog" of May 14.

The research fellowships granted by the Atomic Energy Commission are to help build a reservoir of trained scientists for service in industry, professions and the Government. If anyone is to enjoy the largest of the people, then we have the right and duty to require that their loyalty is not of a dubious quality. Otherwise, what "service" are we to expect from them?

It seems established that one of these students is a "real, live Communist" as you state in your editorial, but you maintain that political beliefs have no bearing on basic research. However, political beliefs do bear weightily upon the field of nuclear physics and atomic energy in which this student is working. This is a highly sensitive area demanding the utmost loyalty and responsibility to the United States.

The logical extension of your editorial is, then, that we ought to aid and abet our enemies even to the extent of training them.

This is not a question of political beliefs vs. basic research, but a question of right or wrong. Clearly, the handling of this question by your paper, by the National Academy of Sciences and by the Atomic Energy Commission has been and is dangerous to the security of the United States in every sense and in every implication.

Home Rule

Your May 15 issue reports Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas as thinking it unlikely that the District home rule bill will be taken up in the Senate this year, even though it is already before that body with a favorable report of the District Committee.

On April 15, 1950, there will begin the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the moving of the Capital to Washington. The preliminary plans bear the name "Freedom Fair."

How would it look to be celebrating 150 years' progress of American freedom in a place where, for the last half of those 150 years, that freedom has been conspicuously reduced by a lack local self-government? The only way to restore that freedom before the celebration begins next spring is to put the home rule bill through Congress this session, so that it can be followed by the referendum in November, election in March, and installation in April, as scheduled in the bill.

Congress should also take the first steps toward remedying another lack of political freedom here, to be remedied by a constitutional amendment to permit representation for the District in our national Legislature and in presidential elections. If such an amendment is under way next year, the visitors to the sesquicentennial can be impressed with the fact that the completion of that job is up to them in seeing that there is prompt ratification in the required number of States.

Britisher's Thanks

On my way home to England after a stay of nearly eight months I should like to express my gratitude to Americans for the treatment I received from them during my visit

For most of the time I lived with relatives in a northern suburb of your magnificent city of Washington but traveled some 3000 miles by rail and possibly 4000 by automobile reaching as far as Chicago to the west, Niagara to the north and Durham, N. C., to the south.

From officials in pursuance of their duty, from employes at hotels, at restaurants and on public vehicles I received nothing but courtesy and politeness. Fellow travelers by rail showed me consideration, kindness and generosity while friends to whom I was introduced by my relatives treated me spontaneously with the utmost hospitality. All this despite the fact that I am well over 70 years of age, am a stranger to your customs and ways, and am very obviously English. One of my most pleasant recollections will be that the very English speech which betrays me has proved in many instances the key to American hearts.

A few, and to my mind unjust, things about my country have been said in my hearing but not to me personally. They represent, I think, the exceptions which prove the rule of widespread sympathy and good feeling for the British in their present circumstances.

Some people that I have met or spoken to who were in Britain during the war and received small kindnesses there are almost overwhelming in their gratitude to those who befriended them. What I sincerely hope is that my own countrymen will learn to overcome their natural reserve and show to visitors from the United States a friendliness equal to that which I have experienced over there.

Spanish Civil War

James F. Stanton's May 11 letter, "Anti-Communist Spain," displays lack of information. The Spanish civil war was not fought between Communists and anti-Communists. There were almost no Communists in Spain. The civil war was fought between a moderate but democratic government and a fascistic coalition of the then recently (1931) depowered army, church and landed gentry.

At the time of the civil war only 14 of the 473 members of the Spanish parliament were Communists. In addition the Communist International didn't want a Communist government in Spain. Stalin felt that Spain wasn't "ready" for communism and favored the democratic type of government then in office. He wrote this to a Spanish Socialist Party leader on June 4, 1936, and the letter was reproduced in the New York Times on September 21, 1939.

The Spanish Loyalists (Republicans and/or Popular Frontists) were not "Communist dominated." Because they needed foreign aid to resist the Axis-backed Franco they turned to their only willing helper, Russia. The USSR wanted to keep a friendly democratic state south of France so that France could concentrate its efforts toward keeping Hitler at bay.

To get favorable action from Russia, the moderate Loyalists in September, 1936, several months after the start of the civil war, invited two Communists to join a coalition cabinet of 13 members. These were the only Communists in important national positions, and they came in after the civil war had started. The Loyalists got only three shipments of war equipment from Russia. All shipments ceased after an Italian submarine sank one of the Soviet ships on December 14, 1936.

Japanese Reparations

The recent announcement of the United States' intention to obliterate the reparation obligations of Japan constitutes the latest development of the changing United States policy toward Japan in seeking to build up that former enemy country as a stronghold in face of mounting Communist influences in Asia.

The Potsdam declaration which brought to an end the war in the Pacific enunciated the principle that just reparations in kind should be exacted from Japan. Pursuant to this principle, the 11-nation Far Eastern Commission here in Washington has adopted for the past three years various policies designed to carry it into effect. All those international agreements were agreed upon by the Allied Powers, including the United States.

The changing of mind on the part of the United States merely furnishes another example of the vacillating policy of this country toward the Far East and admits of further loss of face of this country among the peoples of that vast area, at a time when their faith in the unswerving leadership of the United States is most needed.

We put blame on Soviet Russia for its intransigent attitude of refusing to treat Germany as an economic unit which made reparations from Germany infeasible. But in Japan no such factor enters the picture.

We persuaded western European nations to waive claims of further dismantling of German industrial facilities on the assumption that brighter prospects of recovery could be produced by gearing the productive capacity of Germany into the general European Recovery Program. The North Alantic Pact was proposed with one of its purposes to remove from the mind of the peoples in Europe the fear of a resurgent Germany. But no similar assurances could we give to the peoples in the Far East and the Pacific. They are simply being alienated.

They find themselves not only denied their legitimate right of reparations, promised and assured thus far, but also faced with an economically strong and potentially aggressive Japan in spite of their contribution to its defeat. Their fear and grievances may easily fall prey to Communist propaganda which has already effectively exploited nationalistic feelings in Asiatic countries.

The reason given to justify the reversal of the United States policy with regard to Japanese reparations problems is that reparations removals could only strip Japan of adequate resources necessary for the attainment of its selfsufficiency.

It is common knowledge that Japan could not expect to achieve selfsufficiency without due access to raw materials and markets in its neighboring countries. Unbalanced expansion of Japanese industries without corresponding economic stability and industrial development in its neighboring countries could only result in two alternatives, Either the underdeveloped countries would have to resort to boycott against Japanese exports, as was done in the past, in order to protect their economic independence, or Japan would be led again to embark upon aggressive policy in the interest of its "self-sufficiency."

Matter Of Fact

Mobilization in Hong Kong

HONGKONG.—To the visitor arrived from Shanghai, Hongkong appears wonderfully calm and comfortable. The Shanghai streets are like a carnival in a nightmare; the streets of Hongkong like a bustling, colorful country fair. On the peak above the city there are big, comfortable houses, cool breezes, and that air of peaceful stuffiness which is the hallmark of British colonial existence.

But the real difference between Hongkong and Shanghai is quite of another, more grim order. This city is sternly mobilizing for its own defense. It is mobilizing because there is a chance that something as ugly as what is now happening in Shanghai may start here within a few weeks or months. It is mobilizing because there is even a very remote chance that China's civil war may become an international war when it reaches Hongkong's borders.

Before too long (six weeks to three months is the best guess), the Communist "People's Liberation Army" will arrive at the borders of Hongkong's leased territory on the mainland. Mao Tse Tung's victorious troops will then face a reinforced Hongkong garrison of some 12,000 British troops—hardly more than a corporal's guard. But if the "People's Liberation Army" then attempts to "liberate" Hongkong, the British troops will fight.

THE BRITISH do not expect to have to fight. Yet they are making their intention to resist if attacked as obvious as possible. Fighter planes have arrived at the totally inadequate Kaitak airfield on the mainland. Aircraft carriers and other fleet reinforcements are steaming toward Hongkong. British troops in Singapore have been alerted to be ready for Hongkong duty on short notice. All this is intended to warn the Communists that an attack on Hongkong will mean war with a major power.

There are other reasons why the British do not expect to have to fight. The businessmen especially rather nervously hope that the Communists have already decided to allow Hongkong to continue to function as a funnel for trade and a "window to the West." The evidence which supports this view is certainly not conclusive, but it is strikingly interesting.

A kind of barter trade, rather like the China trade of the clipper ship days, has been quietly carried on between Hongkong and the Communist north ever since the initial Communist victories. As in the old days, it has sometimes been highly profitable, with a single voyage netting a neat 100 per cent return. And very recently the Communists have evinced a more formal interest in trade with Hongkong.

They first approached a great Chinese bank, with close Nationalist connections, to act as their Hongkong trading agent. The Chinese bank, whose main branches were still under Nationalist control, refused as politely as possible. The Communists then turned to a Belgian bank, with correspondents throughout the world. The Belgian bank accepted the assignment with pleasure. Already lubricating oil, paper, and trucks are going north in exchange for shipments of bristles, soya beans, and coal from the great Kailan mines.

ON THE other side of the balance sheet, less optimistic political observers point out that Hongkong is a rich prize, and that when the Communists control the mainland the prize of this little island will be almost within their grasp. Moreover, the Communists could hope to seize the prize, if they were so minded, by a process of strangulation, rather than by direct assault.

Hongkong could be cut clean off from China, and trade with China is Hongkong's reason for being. Then the pressure could be steadily increased. Hongkong's commerce could be thrown into confusion by a flood of hundreds of millions of Hongkong dollars from south China, where the Hongkong dollar has become the main medium of exchange. Finally, the Hongkong utilities, whose labor unions are Communist-controlled, could be struck, and bloody street riots and looting promoted by Communist agents. The pressure to abandon Hongkong on almost any terms would then be very heavy, although the British assert stoutly that they intend to withstand any pressure whatever.

In this rather ominous situation, only two points are clear. First, the way the Chinese Communists choose to deal with Hongkong will be the first decisive test of their policy toward the Western world as a whole. If they adopt the "window to the West" approach to the Hongkong problem, we can assume that for the immediate future they will wish to carry on extensive trade. Second, if the Chinese Communists attack Hongkong, there will be a fight; that fight will extend beyond Hongkong's borders. And there will even be danger of a Far Eastern war.

A Word-Wise Contemporary Fivesome . . .

3000 Hear Tolerance Plea At Book and Author Night

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Optimism in world affairs, and a plea for greater tolerance, were voiced at Book and Author Night in Constitution Hall last evening.

Held in connection with the American Booksellers' Association convention, the program included John Mason Brown, Arnold J. Toynbee, Quentin J. Reynolds, Munro Leaf and Esther Forbes.

The event was cosponsored by The Washington Post, and Publisher Philip L. Graham served as chairman. Some 3000 persons attended.

Brown, dramatic critic and essayist, in a frequently applauded speech, said freedom of expression is more and more being challenged by minority groups.

Brown cited censorship pressure by a Jewish "minority within the minority" on the showing of the film "Oliver Twist" on the grounds that it was anti-Semitic; similar objection to "The Merchant of Venice"; effort by a Catholic group to prevent Cardinal Richelieu being shown in ecclesiastical robes in the film "The Three Musketeers"; and objections by Negro groups to "Little Black Sambo" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"You cannot banish history by pretending it never took place," Brown said.

"What these people are writing about, or showing in films, are human beings, and if you have human beings you are going to have villains and human nature.

"The pursuit for all of us is tolerance through truth. I think just as a minority has the right to be protected, so does the majority have the right to be protected against censorship by small groups."

Toynbee Optimistic

Toynbee, author of "A Study in History," said that the Russians are "betting" that their way of life will win, and the West is betting that its way will win.

"To win the cold war, and I think it may take perhaps many lifetimes," Toynbee said, "the West must take a positive, not a negative approach.

The British historian said he he had been watching the American "revolution in attitude toward foreign affairs and therefore I am an optimist."

Reynolds, widely traveled journalist and author, praised the Marshall Plan and said: "I think some day history will recall 1948 as the year that saw the rebirth of democracy in Europe.

"I spent nearly all of 1948 in Western Europe and the Middle East, and it is my conviction that the people of Western Europe are democracy's secret weapon."

Munro Leaf, author of "Sam and the Superdroop" and other books, said, "there is very little time in the world of the 6 or 8-year-old today for the reading of good books."

Citing school, outdoor recreation, home work, movies, radio, television and comic books, Leaf said, "when they have all had their proportion of interest there is very little time left."

Unless people fight against the forces that are working against reading habits, Leaf said, "we are going to have a generation that has less and less contact with books."

Esther Forbes, novelist and historian, described some of her experiences in the book world. Recalling that she had once read manuscripts for a Boston publishing house, she said that as a writer "I have learned quite a lot from reading bad manuscripts." They always tell you to read the King James Bible and Tolstoy, "but I learned a lot from the bad manuscripts."

As for reading, she said, "I think it is just as true today as in Francis Bacon's time, that reading maketh the full man."

Book Club Problem

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the board of Brentano's and United States Ambassador to Egypt, declared earlier in the day that because of book clubs, publishers were destroying their retail outlets.

Griffis, who said that insofar as he knew the Brentano's chain of book shops "does the largest retail book business in the world," spoke at a convention luncheon of the American Booksellers Association in the Hotel Shoreham yesterday.

The book club "problem" also came in for discussion at other sessions of the convention. Gilbert Goodkind, executive secretary of the ABA, said an investigation has been initiated to learn whether trade practices that enabled book clubs to sell books more cheaply than book shops violated any Federal statutes.

Griffis said: "I know of no business in this country where the manufacturer so consistently does so much to destroy the outlets upon which he is dependent.

"I do not believe the present policy of publishers can continue. I do not believe publishers will continue to destroy their outlets and force us into selling suits with four pairs of trousers given away to sell the suit."

Robert B. Campbell, of Los Angeles, who had been reelected president of the ABA by a mail vote, said there is "no more serious problem" than the current "discriminatory" postal rate, and that "despite this staggering blow, the industry today is confronted with a proposal for still another increase."

Miss Miriam Whitehead, a Chicago bookseller, was awarded a $1000 prize for the winning entry in a contest for the best plan to sell books. The award was presented by Sidney Satenstein in behalf of the book industry committee, Book Manufacturers' Institute.

The four-day convention will close today. Publishers' exhibits will be open to the public from 9 to 7 p. m. Thursday.

David E. Lilienthal, United States Atomic Energy Commission chairman, will speak at the convention banquet at 7 p. m. today.

Science Pries Into Love-Life Of Microbes

Cincinnati, May 17 (AP).—Love-life in the germ world may be the key to why certain microbes develop resistance to powerful drugs like streptomycin, some scientists theorized today.

They offered that interpretation of a report made by Dr. Joshua Lederberg of the University of Wisconsin at the annual meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists.

Lederberg reported evidence that at least one form of bacteria can reproduce itself sexually just as animals and man do.

This is at variance with the concept long held that microbes reproduce themselves only by cell division—that is, a given germ divides to produce offspring without the aid of a sexual partner.

Some scientists said the significance of the report was this:

1. The report offers a possible explanation as to why a certain germ—such as the tuberculosis bacillus—becomes resistant to streptomycin after a time in certain cases. It might well be, they said, that germs which are themselves sensitive to the drug can produce, before they are overcome, offspring that are too tough for the medicine.

2. The research opens wide possibilities of speeding studies on heredity. Such genetic research is now largely done with fruit flies, which require months to reproduce. Bacteria multiply in from 18 to 48 hours.

Doctor Lederberg reported on studies employing an organism called "escherichia coli"—a germ commonly found in the intestinal tract, but not necessarily a cause of sickness.

Ordinarily, he said, this germ causes lactose—the familiar sugar found in milk—to ferment in the test tube. But he found that when certain combinations of this coli germ were placed in test tubes together, a strain was produced which failed to ferment the lactose—indicating the production of an offspring different from either original type.

Washington Calling

Free Inquiry And The Atom

THAT satanic genius, Adolf Hitler, predicted as the flames of his funeral pyre were beginning to leap up that the victory of the Western democracies would be an empty one. They would become, said Hitler, like the Nazi state they professed to loathe.

Childs

In 1945 only a gloomy prophet would have suggested that less than four years after the war's end it would be seriously proposed that young science students receiving fellowships out of Federal funds be investigated by the FBI for their political beliefs. But that is what is happening.

The most thorough investigation for any scientist engaged on secret research for the Atomic Energy Commission, everyone would agree to. The scholarships awarded by the National Research Council, out of commission funds, are not in that category. One of those scholarships went to Hans Freistadt, a student in physics at the University of North Carolina and a Communist.

In the reaction to the Freistadt fellowship are attitudes that reflect the totalitarian approach to science and the right of free inquiry. First is the attitude of the well-meaning individual who says, "Well, why give anyone any training with Government funds if he is a Communist and if, therefore, he can never be cleared for secret work."

ONLY ONE step beyond this attitude is the plain implication that all scientific inquiry must be harnessed to the practical needs of government. It ignores the vast field of pure research that has nothing to do with the practical aims of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Out of pure research most of the great discoveries have come. The boundaries of this field are not marked by politics, race or religion. When Italian fascism and German nazism drove out Einstein, Fermi, Lise Meitner and the others, they destroyed science and irreparably injured their hope of triumph in a scientific world.

The furor over the Friestadt fellowship implies a fear that would be comic if it were not so tragic. Here is a great and powerful Nation that has pushed scientific development to great lengths. Yet the fact that one or two or three young men with Communist beliefs are going on in research sends some people into a panic.

What this seems to me to reflect is a pathetic lack of faith in the strength and vitality of our own way of life. Is Hans Freistadt, aged 23, a naturalized American with a European background, committed to communism for life? Isn't it possible that when he learns more about our system and its rewards and satisfactions, including even scholarships for those who hold alien political beliefs, he will give up communism?

The right of free scientific inquiry has long since been blacked out in the Soviet Union. A few politicians holding absolute power dictate what scientists in Russia must think and say.

THE MAN who knows most about this is H. S. Muller, professor of zoology at the University of Indiana. When the pro-Communists were holding their phony peace conference at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York not long ago, a group of men of science and thought gathered to protest the totalitarian suppression of the mind, and Muller was among them.

He spoke with a deep and selfish sincerity of the right of free inquiry and how this right had been won through centuries of struggle and sacrifice. Muller told how the science of genetics had been destroyed in the USSR and great men of science liquidated or sent to work camps. He had known those men as fellow scientists.

To make ourselves over in the image of the totalitarian state is to admit defeat; to close the door on the last best hope of earth. Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, honestly and courageously sought in his Detroit speech of last January to show how the net of secrecy thrown around atomic production and the number of atom bombs has put Congress under a grave handicap in legislating for national defense and national security. It is secrecy of a kind, as McMahon pointed out, that this country has never before known in peacetime.

Vital secrets must be kept. But to allow the possession of the atomic bomb to blight the fundamental base of our freedoms is to risk the loss of our heritage. There are those so ridden by fear and distrust that they are apparently eager to call in the military, bar the doors and forget the very qualities that distinguish a free society from a slave society. Once the surrender begins, it can go very fast.

Aureomycin Found Beneficial In Treating Whooping Cough

The drug aureomycin may be the answer to more effective treatment of whooping cough, the United States Public Health Service reported here yesterday.

Current studies, it was announced, indicate that aureomycin, a relatively nontoxic antibiotic which can be given by mouth, may shorten the course of the disease and lessen its intensity.

So far, 20 patients have been treated in their homes with aureomycin with apparently beneficial results, the Public Health Service declared.

Doctors Joseph A. Bell, Margaret Pittman and Byron J. Olson have been working on the project in the Microbiological Institute, one of the National Institutes of Health, at Bethesda, Md., since December, 1948.

They found that aureomycin hydlochloride when injected under the skin of mice infected with the disease prevented deaths. Small doses of the drug given at 12-hour intervals over periods of eight days were more effective than larger doses given over a short period of time.

The announcement said preliminary clinical trials suggest that aureomycin given orally shortened the clinical course of the disease when compared with 380 untreated cases.

However, Government scientists stated, further clinical trial is necessary before the value of aureomycin is established for general use in treatment of whooping cough.

Nurses Set Thursday as Open House

Boasting a new achievement record, the nurses school of Gallinger Hospital yesterday announced that "open house" activities will be held there Thursday afternoon.

Invited are District high school counsellors and graduating students interested in entering the nursing profession.

Student nurses of the school this year made the highest average of District nursing school classes in tests conducted by the State Board of Nurses' Examiners, according to Miss Beatrice E. Ritter, director of nursing.

Thursday's program, from 3 to 5 p. m., will consist og guided tours of the nursing school, formally named the Capital City School of Nursing of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, inspection of the hospital facilities and refreshments.

Hearing on Sick Leave For Teachers Delayed

A House District subcommittee's hearing on the proposed teachers' sick-leave bill yesterday was rescheduled for Monday at 10 a. m.

Representative Thomas G. Abernathy (D., Miss.), chairman of the District Health and Education subcommittee, postponed yesterday's scheduled hearing at the last minute when all other committee members could not attend, due to other committee assignments.

Lost Jewels' Value Disputed in Court

Gem experts were in wide disagreement yesterday in District Court when they made estimates as to the value of jewels lost by Mrs. Hilda Yen Male, United Nations employe.

Mrs. Male is suing Norman Seidenberg, trading as J. Clinton Tribby, a jewelry firm, at 3123 M st. nw., claiming she left three gems with him in 1945 to be remounted.

They were lost, she says. They were a Chinese jade she valued at $6000, a star sapphire she valued at $1125, and another sapphire she claims was worth $495. She is asking $7620, the value she placed upon them, plus interest.

Yesterday, in the courtroom of Judge Jennings Bailey, Austin Canfield, attorney representing Seidenberg, admitted his client's liability, but declared Mrs. Male has overvalued her gems.

Canfield said that after accepting the jewels, Seidenberg turned them over to Jacob Limon, a jewerel at 1311 G st. nw., specializing in remounting work. The jewels subsequently were returned, Canfield said, placed in a repair box at the Tribby store, and disappeared.

Canfield called Limon to the stand. Limon said that in his opinion the three gems were worth only about $300.

Another jeweler, Harry Woodruff, appearing for the plaintiff, testified he had studied photographs of the jewels, and agreed with Mrs. Male's estimate of their value.

Light That Failed Ruins Parisian's Publicity Stunt

Paris, May 17 (U.P.)—Mario Fabre stood on his head atop a 100-foot obelisk in the Place de la Concorde today as a publicity stunt for a new cigarette lighter.

He liked the view so much he refused to come down. Firemen pleaded, his father wept, publicity men wailed over a walkie-talkie and traffic jammed.

After 6 hours and 20 minutes he finaly descended. He called for a cigarette and one of the new lighters. All eyes were on him.

Man Accused As Gambler, $2472, Seized

Edward J. Hoffman, 54, of 1221 Wisconsin ave. nw., was arrested by vice squad officers yesterday near his home and charged with setting up a gaming table. Confiscated was $2472 in cash he was carrying, police said.

According to Lieut. Roy Blick, several marked bills were found among the $2472. He said undercover men had been investigating Hoffman "five or six days" and had made bets with him.

Lieutenant Blick described Hoffman as a lone operator. He was picked up by five vice squad members about 2 p. m. at a restaurant at 1329 Wisconsin ave. nw., Blick said. The officer said the confiscated money was "an unusually large amount," but had no explanation why Hoffman had that much on him.

Hoffman was later arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and placed in $1500 bond for a hearing May 26.

In another case, Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott placed another man charged with setting up a gaming table in $1000 bond and continued a hearing until May 24.

He is Charles Irving Boyd, 30, of 420 12th st. se. Boyd was arrested by vice squad officers Monday afternoon while driving his car along Branch ave. se.

According to police, a quantity of numbers slips and rundown tape was found in Boyd's car. They said he transported numbers from the District to nearby Maryland.

The vice squad also reported it found $161 in cash and checks for $250 and $35 in Boyd's possession.

During 1948 Americans ate an average of more than an egg per day—a total of 388.

connection with the beating of Rowell, although Police Chief Robert J. Barrett had said he thought they were guilty.

Both officers were notified to appear in Municipal Court on May 12, King said. Normally summonses are sent to all witnesses on the day the case is scheduled, although officers are expected to follow their own cases. King said a commissioners' order also required District employes to appear in court at the request of the corporation counsel without being summoned.

King said he had told the man in the corporation counsel office in charge of sending out summonses to "be sure Roche and Bonaccorsy get theirs" for May 12. He said he did this, because the officers had failed to appear on at least two other occasions.

Roche could not be reached for comment but Bonaccorsy said last night he would "have to talk to Charley Ford" before he would reveal why he had not appeared at Barnes' trial May 12.

Charles E. Ford is a criminal lawyer, who represents many Metropolitan policemen.

Asked if it were true he had been summoned to appear in court May 12 by the corporation counsel, Bonaccorsy said he could not remember.

Prosecution Defied By Mrs. Rutledge

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 17 (U.P.).—Mrs. Sydney Rutledge, 23, defied prosecution attempts today to destroy her story she was forced into sexual intimacy with the man her husband killed.

The State hammered in cross-examination at her testimony that Byron C. Hattman forced her to submit to him in her St. Louis apartment last July. She admitted only one point—she didn't scream.

Her husband, Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, 28, is on trial charged with stabbing Hattman to death in a hotel room here last December 14.

Tall, blond Sydney told Prosecutor William Crissman she struggled with Hattman and tried to push him away. She said she could not remember screaming and could not remember if she had been bruised.

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
MRS. SYDNEY RUTLEDGE
Looks prosecutor in eye

Sydney and 29-year-old Hattman were fellow employes of an electrical firm in St. Louis. Yesterday she testified he took her for a sailboat ride, gave her four beers and four double bourbons, and forced her onto a bed. She sobbed that she fought Hattman but was weak and ill from the liquor.

The defense contends Hattman sought money from Rutledge to leave his wife alone, and that the doctor went to Cedar Rapids to try to buy him off and the engineer was slain.

Crissman ended his cross-examination by asking her if she told Cedar Rapids Detective Tom Condon on December 17 'substantially, that you were as much to blame as Hattman was."

"I did not, to my knowledge," she said.

The defense questioned Dr. Philip Crew of Marion, Iowa, who said Hattman "could have been" stabbed with a jackknife and that the death wound could have been inflicted in a struggle or it could have been "self-inflicted."

Detectives Sift Parish House Murder Clews

Roanoke, Va., May 17 (AP).—Detective Capt. Frank M. Webb today correlated information members of the Detective Bureau have received since Lee Scott, 16, was charged last Tuesday with the murder of a classmate, Dana Marie Weaver.

The girl was slain in the kitchen of the parish house of Christ Episcopal Church on the night of May 8. Her body was found by the church janitor the following morning.

The slaying was discussed by members of city council yesterday and City Attorney Randolph G. Whittle was requested to ask Commonwealth's Attorney C. E. Cuddy whether he needed any assistance, either in preparation of the case or in handling routine matters while Cuddy is involved with the case.

Captain Webb said today that he did not expect a complete report for a week or 10 days from the office of the chief medical examiner in Richmond on tests being performed on clothing and other evidence gathered in the case.

Soaring Costs Cut Southern Railway Net

By S. Oliver Goodman

"We've got to work more than twice as hard merely to stand still," Ernest E. Norris told stockholders of the Southern Railway Co. at the annual meeting yesterday.

Norris

"Regardless of what we do to increase our efficiency and economy the results are constantly minimized or nullified by the constantly outstretched hands of the 'gimme' boys," declared the blunt-speaking Southern president.

Comparing the Southern's revenues for the years 1940 and 1948, Norris said that although gross revenues increased from $105,965,000 in 1940 to $245,013,000 in 1948, "enormously rising costs of all kinds left only an additional 7½ million dollars, in today's 50-cent dollars, in our net railway operating income."

"Taxes," he added, "jumped from $8,391,000 in 1940 to $27,720,000 in 1948. Employes got $120,600,000 last year as compared to $48,300,000 in 1940.

"In the first three months this year," he said, "net operating income was $4,594,094 compared with $7,121,726 in the same 1948 period.

K-F in Red $5,805,298 in First Quarter

Reno, Nev., May 17 (AP).—Kaiser-Frazer Corp. lost $5,805,298 during the first quarter of 1949, the company reported at its annual stockholders meeting here today.

The loss resulted from reduced prices on its cars and changeover costs for new models, President Edgar F. Kaiser told the stockholders.

Kaiser said, however, that retail sales of the company's cars are currently running approximately two and one-half times more than the weekly average for the first quarter of this year.

The first quarter loss compares with a profit of $2,288,000, or 50 cents a share, for the first quarter of 1948.

Meanwhile, the attempt of a retired Marine lieutenant colonel to force the company to pay a dividend on its stock apparently failed.

K. O. Cuttle of Long Beach, Calif., last January advertised in newspapers in an affort to obtain stockholders' proxies to force the issue at today's meeting.

The company, in a letter to stockholders, opposed his move.

Court Pleas Filed for Beltsville Line

Annapolis, Md., May 17 (AP).—The Beltsville trolley must go through, the Court of Appeals was told today.

Lawyers for the State Public Service Commission said the Capital Transit Co. of Washington is bound by a gentleman's agreement to save the country carline.

Scrapping it would be "a breach" of "an unwritten covenant" between Capital Transit and the Prince Georges County trolley commuters, they told the court. Many families moved to the Beltsville area because of the trolley service, the PSC said.

Capital Transit argued its three-mile suburban shuttle between Beltsville and Branchville serves only a "sparsely settled area."

The transit firm asked the high court for permission to abandon the line because it shows a steady loss. Often, the two streetcars travel empty, the utility said.

The public service commission appealed from a decision by Circuit Judge W. Conwell Smith who held last December that the company has a right to junk the carline. An earlier PSC order directed Capital Transit to keep the line going.

Company lawyers argued the commuters can use Greyhound buses along the parallel Baltimore-Washington boulevard.

The PSC replied that school children would "risk their lives" to wait for buses on "the most dangerous highway in the entire Nation."

How I reach the Big Ones ...down where they are with a hand from my "Unseen Friend"
BY FRED STREEVER, Veteran Fisherman

"One August day a few years ago, I was trolling over deep water, close to North Ledge in Lake George.

"I figured there were fish in that hole. It had been a hot summer, so I knew the big ones would be 'way down deep where the water was cool. The trick would be to get the lure down to them. And I didn't want to use the old time lines of linen or silk, where I needed heavy lead sinkers. Sure we caught fish in those olden days... but it's not my idea of sport to drag a five pound lake trout up through a hundred feet of water with two pounds of lead hooked to his nose.

"But I knew I had the answer, for I had brought along my "Unseen Friend," Nickel.

"Trailing out from the tip of my rod were 450 feet of thin, flexible wire line, made of a strong, rustproof Nickel alloy called Monel. With this wire line, but without lead sinkers, I had found I could troll at any depth I chose ... and flash my shining Nickel spoon just where I wanted it.

"Suddenly a violent strike almost bent my rod to the water . . . and the fight was on!

"With my light line and flexible rod every squirm and twist of the hooked fish was telegraphed up that extremely sensitive Monel line right into my fist! Hour-long minutes later my eye caught a gleam of the fish, twisting and fighting, some twenty feet below the surface. In a desperate effort to get leverage and free itself, it had rolled itself into the line. But that fine wire held firm... and soon a lake trout big enough for two family dinners was thrashing in my net.

"Yes, many times I've been grateful to Monel line. It's far stronger than any fibre, yet so thin you can get two or three times as much on your reel. What's more, it can't rust..., can't rot ...so you don't have to dry it."

Yes, Nickel alloys are real fishing allies... in everything from Nickel silver reels to "Z" Nickel hooks. You'll find friendly Nickel in leaders . . . even in the fool-proof Monel bead chain swivels that keep your line from getting snarled up.

But the Nickel is usually combined with other metals, so you seldom actually see it. And that's why Nickel is called "Your Unseen Friend."

Take a "Taykit" Pocket Stove ...For a little stove that does a big job on quick hot snacks, ask your sporting goods dealer to show you the "Taykit" Pocket Stove. Folded, it fits into your pocket... assembled in one minute, it burns for 1½ hours on half a cup of gasoline! Needs no priming. And "Your Unseen Friend" Nickel helps it stand plenty of rough use, because it's made of tough, rustproof Monel.

So far as the Statler Hotel is concerned, it would seem that the arrival of orchestra leader George Duffy is to summer what the first robins are to spring.

Tyner

Duffy and his 10-piece aggregation began playing Monday in the Statler's Embassy Room, as did Washington's own Evalyn Tyner, one of the land's best pianists in the popular field. For the Duffy boys, it's the third straight tour of summer duty they've pulled in the Embassy Room.

That's why you can pretty well figure, says Earle Brown, the hotel's publicity man, that around the time you spot a gent walking down K st. in a seersucker suit, Duffy and company are making with the music in the Embassy Room.

It was Ted (Is Everybody Happy?) Lewis who gave Duffy the push that started him off in the band business, Brown reports. That was back in Circleville, Ohio, where the top-hatted, clarinet-carrying Lewis was a neighbor of the musician-bandleader-to-be.

With encouragement from Lewis, Duffy began organizing bands in Cleveland. After some time in that line, he joined Jack Miles' new outfit as a pianist and arranger. In 1933 he started up his own orchestra. He's been heading it ever since.

Evalyn Tyner, a native of Kokomo, Ind., used to lead a band herself. That was at the Waldorf-Astoria, and it came after a stint with Xavier Cugat. But you get an idea of her versatility when you learn she's also been featured with symphony orchestras.

In fact, Miss Tyner has pretty well covered most entertainment media. She's been in vaudeville, radio, has made recordings, appeared in night clubs, and even set a record in the Rainbow Room in New York's Radio City by playing there longer than any other artist.

Over at the Bali, Pearl Bailey is holding forth these nights in highly satisfying fashion. Her lazy, deadpan song delivery wows 'em every time.

Miss Bailey, in the past, has proved as effective in movies as she is in person, once again due to that easy-going, straight-faced style. She stole scenes in "Variety Girl" and "Isn't It Romantic?" and she'll probably do it again when she gets the chance.

Particularly amusing are her musical diatribes against the male sex.

MEMORABILIA . . . You can catch some double-barreled entertainment this week at Glen Echo Park. The Three Suns — you've heard their records time and time again—opened Monday at the ballroom, as did Lee Castle, sometimes called "Mr. Trumpet," and his orchestra . . . Coming next Monday to the Mayflower Lounge is the dance team of Freddie Blair and Dorothy Dean, a couple of talented youngsters who have tripped the light fantastic at some of the best nighteries in the country . . . How to keep people happy: Would-be diners at Normandy Farm, which is crowded over weekends, park themselves on the lawn and sip away at cocktails while waiting their turn . . . Top floor of the Old New Orleans Restaurant has been taken over by the International Telecommunications Union Club during its regional Inter-American conference.

Planes Hunt Crews Forced Off Ships

Halifax, N. S., May 17 (AP).—Planes searched the snow-spattered North Atlantic today for two ships' crews who took to lifeboats yesterday when their vessels met disaster.

The ships are the 120-ton Danish motor schooner Ebba, whose 20 crewmen are adrift in storm-tossed seas, and the fire-gutted vessel Uronick, whose crew of 15 is missing.

Two Lancaster bombers joined the search for the crew of the Ebba, which sank 200 miles off Greenland in a roaring gale.

The small fishing schooner Uronick was believed carrying 500 gallons of gasoline when she caught fire.

Crew of the vessel was reported to have safely abandoned ship, but her skipper radioed the Uronick was "dangerous to shipping" and advised other vessels not to approach.

A plane flew over the area where the Uronick was burning but found no sign of her crew.

Hearing Postponed On Potomac Gas Plea

A Federal Power Commission hearing scheduled today on a petition of the Potomac Gas Co. has been postponed until June 1 at the request of the Arlington County Board, which is intervening in the case.

The Potomac company is asking authority to buy 13,000 feet of natural gas pipeline in Arlington County from the Rosslyn Gas Co. Both gas companies agreed to the postponement.

One on the Aisle—

Italian 'Tragedy' Is Hopeful Film

By Richard L. Coe

ANOTHER RUTHLESS, REALISTIC picture from Italy arrives today at the Dupont. This is "Tragic Hunt," and though more ragged in form and less of an entity than "Open City" or "Paisan," it is a gripping film.

As in Italy's other distinguished films, "Tragic Hunt" is concerned with a world that is neither easy nor pleasant for us in our rich land to fathom. For its people are those who live on the razor's edge of subsistence in a land whose recent history is a nightmare. Despite its title, "Tragic Hunt" is a hopeful, even stirring film; Christian charity is its message, and in daring those without fault to cast the first stone at the story's villain, the picture's hero voices that spirit of compassion that has been at the root of all the recent Italian triumphs.

No picture of chaotic Italy can be appreciated without considering its recent history. Fascism, the triumph of the extreme right, succeeded by a rosy view of far-off empirical wars, that followed by grievous awakening to reality, then the nerve-wracking squeeze play from the Allies in the Mediterranean and the Germans from the north. Inevitably all this brought on wildest confusion, triumphs of the little foxes, the growth of selfishness, then evil, in the weaker, the determination to unite in the stronger. Breaking the hold of the one extreme led to the sharp disillusionment of the other.

Against the background, Directors-Writers Giuseppe De Santis and Carlo Lizzani tell the story of a government subsidy to a small band of cooperative farmers. Without the subsidy, their farm would revert to the prewar owners, who fled their responsibility during the tough days and now want their land back.

"TRAGIC HUNT." Films International release produced by Lux Films. Screen play by Carlo Lizzani and Giuseppe De Santis. Directed by De Santis. At the Dupont.

THE CAST

Daniela	Vivo Gioi
Alberto	Andrea Checchi
Giovanna	Carla Del Poggio
Giuseppe	Vittorio Duse
Michele	Massimo Girotti

Actually the Core

But the cash subsidy is stolen on the way back to the farm; two men are killed, a bridegroom is separated from his bride when he recognizes one of the thieves as a friend of prison camp days. To save his wife's life, he must keep silent, but gradually the entire camp and surrounding countryside rises in arms to track down the thieves.

Ringleaders of these are a female collaborationist and her lover, whose wrist still bears thee mark of a Nazi prisoner. How they are tracked down and how he is ultimately forgiven is the theme of this moral chase picture.

The style is jagged in the extreme, but that is most apt to this story. It brings us from the comfort of Dupont Circle to the shattered, wasted soil of Italy, and as one catches the passionate anger against those who have betrayed humanity, one is stirred by the recognition of forgiveness at the end.

The performances are not so artless as those in "Shoe Shine," "Open City" or "To Live in Peace," but the thoroughness with which Vivo Gioi plays the collaborationist will curl your hair as thoroughly as the angry Italians have sheared hers. The other performances are suitable without being particularly outstanding. Reality and actually are the core of "Tragic Hunt."

"OKLAHOMA!" NOTE: Saturday night in Barre, Vt., will ring down the curtain of what's been known as "The New York Company" of "Oklahoma!" which opened as "Away We Go" in Boston in March, 1943 . . . So runs the news from Edith Gresham, who played Aunt Eller here several times while it was the Natural National . . . That will be quite a night for the Theater Guild, one more strange sight for the northern lights . . . The National Company, though, keeps on, moving tomorrow from Williamsport, Pa., to Hershey, Pa., following close on Judith Anderson's "Medea" in the chocolate town, and headed for Wilmington, Del., next week.

THERE'S A SNEAK preview tonight at the Palace, going on the screen at 8:30, between showings of Clifton Webb in "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College."

LAST NIGHT brought the first of two performances of "The Tempest" in the outdoor Shakespearean theater of American University . . . This annual Shakespearean play has been a tradition at American U. for the past 20 years . . . The play will be repeated tonight; in case of rain, tomorrow night.

BREAKING THE SILENCE—The professional theater comes back to Washington tonight after 42 weeks' absence, with Judith Anderson playing "Medea," supported by Harry Brandon, as Jason. Since the city affords no theater for the actors, they'll be playing under the stars at the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds; if it rains, the drama will be played Thursday night. Seats are on sale at the Willard Hotel lobby. For more abot Miss Anderson, see the story by Genevieve Reynolds, P. B-4

Board Rescinds Sacchino License

The District Commissioners yesterday ordered the automobile dealer's license of James W. Sacchino, trading as the Plaza Auto Sales, Inc., 43 Massachusette ave. nw., revoked immediately.

The action was taken on the recommendation of the District License Board which found Sacchino "guilty of a breach of trust and of embezzlement and misappropriation of moneys belonging to several witnesses."

The board held hearings on April 15 and 27 on complaints by 10 car owners that the dealer failed to pay $10,245 for their cars which he had accepted for resale.

County to Issue New Hospital Bonds

Prince Georges County Commissioners changed their minds again yesterday and it now appears the proposed Prince Georges County Medical Center will become a reality.

Two weeks ago the Commissioners voted to approve issuance of $827,301 in bonds to match a Federal grant of $413,650 to enlarge the Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly.

A few minutes later, at the same meeting, they changed their minds and voted to change their action.

Last week a delegation of doctors and citizens urged the commissioners to change their mind again, but the board finaly voted 3-2 not to issue the bonds.

A delegation of approximately 25 doctors and laymen yesterday once more asked the board to issue the bonds.

The Commissioners first announced they had voted to issue half of the bond issue but later when the doctors said half a loaf wasn't anything, finaly agreed to issue $800,000 in bonds to match the Federal grant.

Four commissioners voted in favor with Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh abstaining.

The enlargement wil provide 110 additional beds, care for Negro and indigent patients, and construction of a contagious disease wing, a central heating plant and a building to house the County Health Department with clinic and laboratory facilities.

May Bradshaw To Retire at Roosevelt High

Miss May P. Bradshaw, who began a teaching career 48 years ago in an elementary school in southeast Washington, will retire as principal of Roosevelt High School at the end of June.

Miss Bradshaw

The gray-haired woman, who has supervised the educational program of thousands of Washington students, said yesterday she is leaving "while still well and able to get out and do some traveling I want to do."

First on her schedule after clearing her desk June 30 will be a trip to Maine and Canada. Since taking over as principal of Roosevelt in 1936 she has had 26 days of leave a year—not enough to pursue a hobby of enjoying the out-of-doors.

As principal of one of the city's largest schools, Miss Bradshaw is at her desk early morning until late in the afternoon and frequently returns at night for meetings.

Supervising the building alone has been "a big housekeeping job." But Miss Bradshaw says she has "enjoyed every minute of my work."

"There is nothing else in the world I would rather have done."

Native of Washington

A native of Washington, Miss Bradshaw attended District schools and was graduated from Eastern High School 50 years ago. Her first teaching job was in the Brent School but shortly she was promoted to a supervising teacher at the old Towers School.

In 1909 she was transferred to old Business High School which later became Roosevelt. She has been a member of the staff every since, first as a teacher of social studies, and later as assistant principal. When she succeeded Allan Davis to the principalship, she became the second principal that the school had in 46 years.

If Miss Bradshaw, who lives at 1631 S st. nw., were to pick one characteristic for a successful teacher it would be "a joy of living."

"Young people," she says, "are themselves so full of joy that they do not react to people who lack it."

Police to Return $20,000 Seized In Rocway Raid

Ellicott City, Md., May 17 (AP).—Walter Novak is getting back the $20,000 that police seized when they raided his gambling casino on Washington-Baltimore boulevard a year ago.

Novak is the operator of Rocway Towers, about a mile north of Laurel in Howard County.

He and 18 others rounded up in the raid last June 5 were convicted of gambling and sentenced to a year in the House of Correction. Most of them now have finished their terms or been paroled.

An opinion by Circuit Judge James Clark, filed today, said the money should be returned to Novak because there is no evidence it actually was bet at the gaming tables.

Lewis Proposes U. S. Steel Parley On Coal Contract

Pittsburgh, May 17 (AP).—United States Steel Corporation today announced receipt of a letter from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, in which he "offered to meet" on a new coal contract.

A spokesman for "Big Steel" said the letter was received by Harry Moses, president of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., a subsidiary. In the past Moses has been a principal figure in negotiations between the U. M. W. and the steel companies which own coal mines.

Montgomery Tax Increase, Cut in Teacher Funds Likely

A Montgomery County tax rate increase and a reduction in funds requested for teacher salary increases were indicated yesterday at the County Council meeting in Rockville.

A preliminary report on county finances in which a tax increase was termed "mandatory" was made public by the councilmen.

The report was made by the New York firm of municipal finance experts, Wainwright, Ramsey andl Lancaster.

On the question of teacher salaries, the council issued a statement declaring it was not "legally or morally obligated" to appropriate sufficient funds to carry out the present teacher salary schedule adopted by the board of education.

Highlight of a busy legislative session yesterdaw was the introduction of a bill which would provide that future council members be chosen at non-partisan elections preceded by a primary to narrow the field.

Some members say present san elections in charter counties are unconstitutional.

State lows prohibiting non-partiA bill setting up a fire-taxing area for the Burtonsville Volunteer Fire Department became the to become law. It was passed unanimously but cannot become first since the council took office law before August 15.

Bills introduced yesterday would: set up fire taxing areas in Gaithersburg-Washington Grove, Silver Spring and Rockville, and empower judges of the circuit court to hire a court stenographer at a salary not to exceed $350 a month.

An amendment to the bill establishing a county-wide library system was offered by Counsilman Lewis Meriam. It would delay establishment of the system indefinitely.

Numerous amendments to the county zoning ordinance were also released. A public hearing on the proposed amendments will be set later.

What Air Mail Subsidy?

A common misconception is that all of the airlines are supported by government subsidy. Let's discuss this:

American Airlines is paid for the transportation of mail at rates established by order of the Civil Aeronautics Board. The rate at which American is being paid was certified by the Board to be "fair and reasonable in terms of quality of service and was not designed to meet the financial needs of the carrier." That rate includes no subsidy.

The United States Post Office Department is American Airlines' largest customer in dollar volume, and we continue to give it the best of service.

It should be remembered also that we transport passengers, express and freight. In 1948, our revenue from those sources was $84,615,000. Our total revenue for the transportation of mail was $4,769,000.

Of the total revenue of American Airlines in 1948 more than ninety-four per cent (94%) came from the transportation of passengers, express and freight. Less than six per cent (6%) came from the transportation of mail.

If, during 1948, the total revenues received for the transportation of mail, $4,769,000, had been the only funds available to meet our expenses we would have been able to operate only 19 days during the year. We did operate 365 days.

American Airlines is a business institution. We take pride in the fact that we have been able to make substantial progress and improvement, with private capital usefully employed in the public's service.

Nat Pitchers' Wildness Hands Tigers 4-2 Victory

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ON THE LONG-DISTANCE PHONE from New York, Hank Greenberg was saying, yes, he'd be in Washington for the National Celebrities Tournament, June 4-5. But right now, for good, sufficient and somewhat alarming reasons, he said, his golf was not uppermost with him.

The vice president of the Cleveland Indians said "Bill Veeck called and he sounded kind of panicky. Wants me to stay with the club and maybe get into uniform and help 'em with their hitting. Our guys aren't hitting a lick, you know. Veek's disappointed at what's been happening, and I'm not thrilled, either."

POVICH

As of yesterday, the Indians were acting nothing like 1948 pennant winners, and had dropped six of their last seven games. Four of 'em were shutout defeats. Their lack of pitching was surpassed only by their sorry hitting. They were in sixth place, and awing nobody.

"We're lucky the Yankees were dropping four straight while we were in our slump," said Greenberg, "or we'd be way out of it instead of 3½ games behind the lead. We still have time to get squared away, but right now Veeck doesn't like it."

VEECK'S CONCERN is natural enough. The Indians, if they are not up in the race, could show a fearful drop in attendance, as much as a million less than last year. Veeck's tremendous overhead, salary list and promotions are geared to big crowds in his big park, and the stockholders are now inured to swollen receipts. Even a club that drew a record 2,600,000 fans at home last year could get hurt.

Veeck knows the importance of keeping the Indians up in the race. He does not welcome too many rich operators like the Yankees, Tigers and Red Sox in the league. A few are all right, but he likes also to associate with the poorer clubs that his team can lick and get those victories so necessary for the first division. The difference between a first-division and second-division club in Cleveland could easily be one million attendance.

On top of the Indians' failure to hit with anything resembling their 1948 vigor, Veeck's pitching staff is rolling uncertainly with the punches. Feller is now definitely sore-armed. Bob Lemon, too, is ailing. Gene Bearden didn't have a thing his last time out. Satchel Paige isn't wowing 'em yet this year. It's all looking pretty serious to Veeck.

AND IN CLEVELAND there's no more chortling over the Vernon-for-Robinson deal of last winter when the Indians were supposed to have snitched a better first baseman from the Nats. Greenberg was saying somewhat shame-facedly, "I thought Vernon was a better ballplayer." He admitted he liked the deal when it was made. Right now he'd like to have Robinson back.

And no wonder. At last reports, Vernon was hitting an anemic .240 for the Indians in contrast to the .309 Robinson is hitting for the Nats. Vernons home run production of two appears pale beside Robinson's six, as do his mere 11 runs batted in compared to Robinson's 19 that are leading the Washington club. And Early Wynn, who also went to the Indians in the deal, hasn't been earning his feed yet.

For the Indians, the chief consolation, as Greenberg was saying, is their nice proximity to the league lead despite their recent futility. They've been getting all the worst of it in injuries, and all the best of it in the sense that no other club has been able to pull far in front. At this time, they're lucky to be in a weak league.

IT WAS A LONG TIME COMING, but the Nats got even with the fates on Monday, when they lucked out that 3-2 victory over the Red Sox, whose tying run was nullified in the ninth in a losing race with the game's final out. Back in 1933, the Nats were the victim of a somewhat similar play, against the Yankees.

One run behind in the last of the ninth, the Nats had Pitcher Monte Weaver on third base, and Buddy Myer on first base with one out, and Joe Cronin up. Cronin delivered the long fly to center that was needed to tie the game, a deep smash, but events proved that he hit it for the Yankees, not the Nats.

Weaver was racing home from third after the catch, but unfortunately Myer was attempting to go from first to second at the same time. Much the faster man, Myer reached second, but found the ball waiting for him. He was out and the game over, with Weaver still two strides from home.

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers tonight traded Outfielder Marv Rackley to the Pittsburgh Pirates for Outfielder-First Baseman Johnny Hopp and cash estimated at $25,000.

Stephens' Homer Wins For Bosox, 4-3

Boston, May 17 (AP).—Boston's stumbling Red Sox opened a lengthy home stand today by shading Chicago's revitalized White Sox, 4-3, thanks to a two-run homer belted by Vern Stephens in the eighth inning.

It was Stephens' ninth four-bagger of the season, a line drive into the screen atop the wall in left.

A paid audience of 10,309, augmented by 1,043 women guests, saw Lefty Mel Parnell, the home club's only consistent pitcher, win his fifth victory.

Mel, who has lost one game, fanned five and walked three as he gave up seven hits.

The Bostonians couldn't do much more against Chicago's Randy Gumpert but managed to use their eight hits in more timely fashion.

C. U. Appoints Jankowski Grid Coach

John Jankowski, who quarterbacked Catholic University teams from 1930 through '34, last night returned to his alma mater as head football coach.

He succeeds another former C. U. athlete, Tom Chisari, who takes charge of the school's athletic equipment.

For the past nine years, Jankowski has been football coach at Central High School, where his teams won 45 games, lost 22 and tied three. His teams won Interhigh championships in 1941, '42 and '48.

The 39-year-old Jankowski plans to remain on the Central faculty as a physical education instructor and will coach either track or baseball there next spring.

A successor to Jankowski as football coach at Central will be announced during the summer. On the Central athletic coaching staff now are Gabe Ferazzi, Alfred (Doc) Collins and Zeke Laubasch.

Those Wondrous Nats

THE HARD-TO-CONVINCE New York baseball writers and Yankee fans are hurling challenges at the fine record of our noble Nats.

I guess we'll have to teach them a lesson. Fortunately for the Yanks, we don't play 'em up there until July 8. By then, maybe they'll recognize that we have a fine team, and not just a good May team.

Far be it from us to plug the New York writers, especially after the nasty things they've been saying, but I thought you might be interested:

Appraising the present state of the American League, Arthur Daley says in the New York Times: "Boston, the best looking team in spring training, is lagging behind Washington, the worst looking team . . .

"EVEN MORE incredible than Washington's nine-game winning streak was the way the Bronx Bombers ruthlessly overrode all opposition. . . . The Tribe was treated rudely by such feeble excuses for ball teams as the Senators . . ."

Said Red Smith in the New York Herald Tribune: "The Senators are not unhinged and this is neither Armageddon nor the millenium. It is merely the middle of May in a perfectly normal baseball season. . . . This little caper of the Senators is nothing at all compared with some of the didoes other clubs have cut in early stages of other races. . . .

". . . Let's all keep cool and wait."

Even a transplanted Yankee fan, Donald W. Wingfield, 5112 Columbia pike, Arlington, gets his three-cents in. "Want to know what I think of your Nats?" he asks. "I think that they are playing over their heads

"It will take more than one streak to win the pennant. Just wait until they hit the Yankee Stadium. Your Nats will be back where they really belong, in the cellar."

All I have to say is, "oh yeah?"

"SILVER SCOT" COMING—Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen—and now Tommy Armour. The first three have played in the National Celebrities tournament and Armour will make his first appearance in the 1949 renewal, June 4-5, at the Army-Navy Country Club. Greatest of medium iron players, Armour won the national open in 1927 and the British open in 1931

73,150 See 16 Yank Hits Top Tribe, 4-3

New York, May 17 (AP).—The New York Yankees collected 15 singles and a home run tonight but had to battle all the way before beating the Cleveland Indians, 4-3, before 73,150 fans, largest crowd of the season at Yankee Stadium.

Ed Lopat wielded seven hits, including homers by Larry Doby and Mickey Vernon in posting his fourth victory of an unbeaten season.

The Yanks, playing their first night home game of the year, rapped Lefty Gene Bearden for all of their hits and runs in the first seven innings.

Billy Johnson's Texas League two-run single in the fifth broke a scoreless tie. The Indians got a run back in the sixth on Dale Mitchell's triple and Vernon's single.

Successive singles by Lopat, Gerry Coleman and Phil Rizzuto in the bottom of the sixth jumped the Yankee lead to 3-1. Doby homered in the seventh but Tommy Henrich duplicated in the Yankee half to account for the margin of victory.

DiMag Returns to Uniform For Workout Next Week

New York, May 17 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, the New York Yankees' $90,000 bench warmer, will don a uniform for the first time this season "some time next week," the club announced tonight.

In a statement given at the Yankee-Cleveland game, Traveling Secretary Arthur (Red) Patterson said that X-rays of Di-Maggio's tender right heel taken earlier in the day were encouraging.

Yankee authorities were unwilling to guess when he would be available for duty. However, one official said that recent talk that Joe might be placed on the disabled list for 60 days "was absurd."

Bell Confers On Redskin Pro Contract

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Brian Bell, jr., 22, former Western High School football star, will confer with Redskin officials this morning about playing pro football in Washington this fall.

For the past three years, the 207-pound Bell has played halfback at Washington and Lee University and led the Generals in scoring.

He was drafted by the Redskins and by the New York Yankees of the All-America Football Conference. He said yesterday, "I'd like to play here in my hometown, but so far the Yankees have offered me more money."

It was understood that the Redskins have offered Bell $6000 to sign while the Yankees have bid $8000. Bell will visit with Jack White, assistant coach of the Yankees, in New York on Thursday.

Bell was scouted by the Yankees last season when W & L defeated the University of Delaware, 21-14. Bell scored all three Generals' touchdowns, one on a 41-yard run and the others on

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Carty Meyerhoffer, who rode his first winner here May 16, 1948, has lost his apprentice allowance. He isn't exactly an Eddie Arcaro, Earle Sande or Sonny Workman but should do well as a journeyman jockey. The voice on the P. A. system here and on the broadcast into Washington is that of Frank Cronin. Jockey Mike Knapp who suffered a broken rib in a spill here during the last meeting, escaped further injury in an auto mishap in which two companions were seriously injured. Jockey Johnny Tammaro is reported to have the biggest appetite in the local jockeys' room. He's first at the lunch counter and first in the reducing cabinet. I guess you'd call that "the curse of food."—

Detection 2d; Bay Orders, Favorite, 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charlestown, W. Va., May 17. Blue Falcon, one of the best bred horses ever to see action here, made it "Blue Tuesday" for his opposition today, performing for Kenneth Wheeler of Baltimore, the son of Mahmoud, and Top Flight led all the way to win the Arlington Purse.

Three lengths behind the 6-year-old grey gelding came Mrs. Morgan Chaney's Detection. Another three lengths back in the field of seven was Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Bay Orders, the favorite.

Ridden by Jockey Frank Law, Blue Falcon, who was purchased as a yearling for a reported $30,000, was clocked in 1:26 4-5 for the about 7 furlongs over a fast track and under smiling skies.

Winner at Pimlico

Blue Falcon's backers collected a $6.20 win mutuel after they watched him turn in his second victory this year in five starts, having led all the way at Pimlico. Owner Wheeler acquired the gelding at the Old Hilltop track via the claiming route for $6000.

There was a lot of hustling and bustling among the others in the field but it failed to produce a really serious challenge. Blue Falcon was credited with winning "handily."

Although the favorite players went down swinging in the main event they had their innings on several occasions during the afternoon and they connected with odds-on choices.

Double Pays Off.

Dick Pending's Chilibones, ridden by Ray Arduini of Washington, took the fourth race at a $3.40 payoff. The return was even lower in the fifth race won by Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Man. The 11-year-old son of Bostonian toyed with the field and paid a skimpy $2.40, the shortest win price of the meeting.

The program opened with a $3.20 mutuel on Mrs. G. O. Russell's Gumptious, superbly handled by Jockey Johnny Tammaro. Those who had this winner with P. W. Rudacill's St. Paul, which took the second race at $9.40, collected $30.60 on the daily double combination of 1 and 1.

All 3 Wolfes Win School Golf Matches

By West McLean
Post Reporter

It was Wolfe, Wolfe and Wolfe yesterday as three cousins, Ricky, Bob and Billy, came through first round matches in the District of Columbia Schoolboy Championship golf tournament at Indian Spring.

Ricky defeated John Eisinger of Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 2 and 1. After being 1 down at the turn Ricky came on strong and had beautiful long iron shots to defeat the Bethesda captain.

Bob beat Lee Edwards of Bullis, 3 and 1, but it was left to 14-year-old Billy, defending champion, to supply the surprise of the day. Billy was trailing 3 down at the turn but parred the fourteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth as Jack Furey of Georgetown Prep took bogeys on all three and saw the match evened.

In the playoff, Billy's drive was in the rough but a nice recovery and chip shot left him about 1 foot away for his par. Furey, under pressure from the tournament-wise Billy, tried to match Billy's shooting but the uphill green proved his undoing and he took a bogey.

Tournament Favorite Dick Foster had an easy time as he downed his Coolidge teammate, Winston Sutter, 6 and 4.

One of the Wolfes won't make the semifinals however, as Bob meets Billy in a second-round match Thursday at Chevy Chase. Billy has been hanging on the ropes throughout the tournament but has always managed to scrape through. He needed a playoff to qualify.

PAIRINGS FOR THURSDAY
Richard Wolfe (BCC) vs. Bill Ball (West.); Dick Foster (Cool.) vs. Sam Boor (BCC); Bob Wolfe (Blair) vs. Billy D. Wolfe (Mont. Blair); Bob Salamy (Cool.) vs. Ed Burnap (BCC).

RESULTS OF FIRST-ROUND MATCHES
Richard Wolfe defeated John Eisinger (BCC), 2 and 1; Bill Ball defeated Don Firor (Dev.), 4 and 3; Dick Foster defeated Winston Sutter (Cool.), 6 and 4; Sam Boor defeated Hugh Reed (Gon.), 1 up; Bob Wolfe defeated Lee Edwards (Bullis), 3 and 1; Billy Wolfe defeated Jack Furey (Geo. Prep), 1 up on 19; Bob Salamy (Cool.) defeated Gerard Cahill (Geo. Prep), 1 up on 19; Ed Burney defeated Lloyd Kelly (Blair), 4 and 3.

Griffs Lose To Detroit, 4-2

Robinson opened the sixth with a single and was forced by Yost, Dente singled to right to move Yost to third. Al Evans scored Yost with a fiery single off Kolloway's glove and moved Dente to third with one out but the Nats got no more out of the inning.

In the sixth after Yost opened with a single to center, Dente deposited him on third with a clever hit-and-run single to left. Yost scored on Evans' slow rolling infield out to Kolloway, and Masterson had another run to work with.

The Tigers didn't get their first hit off Masterson until two were out in the fourth, and going into the eighth he had a superlative two-hit shutout to his credit. And then he pitched one inning too long.

IN SHORT — The customers had a polite boo for Trucks, remembering him as the pitcher who stopped the Nats' streak in the west. . . . The stadium scene could be easily confused with a mid-summer's night, with a high percentage of the fans in shirt sleeves. . . . Trucks doted on the top and bottom of the Nats' batting order, with Gil Coan and Walt Masterson providing his first five strikeouts. . . . The Hi Phillips Oil Co., of Kansas City, has presented the Washington players with snazy cigarette lighters. . . . There wasn't a hard chance for a Washington outfielder until the seventh inning, and then Buddy Lewis contributed a one-handed grab of Aaron Robinson's long drive to the base of the right field wall. . . . Paul Calvert, who has won four in a row for the Nats, will make his first Griffith Stadium start today. . . . He has drawn as his pitching opponent Ted Gray, southpaw rookie of the Tigers who has three wins and is unbeaten. . . . Gray's first major league win was a 1-0 duel last year against Walter Masterson.

Big Top Lunch . . .

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

BUDDIES SHARE THEIR "GRUB"—Emmet Kelly, the famed clown of the sad face, shares the contents of his lunch bag with a circus lot pal, 2-year-old Gilbert Fox. Gilbert is the son of LaNorma, aerial star, and Andre Fox, an equestrian

Thrills Old and New Served By Circus in Opening Here

The circus came to town yesterday and was greeted by hundreds of professional critics who were good enough to take their parents along.

The old but eternally fresh cry of "Oh, look, Mamma, the clown with the big red nose!" rang joyfully through the Big Top.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey, "biggest of 'em all," was showing for the first time this season under canvas, as it will continue to do through Saturday at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m., at 29th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Small Hearts Thrilled

Without such big words—but much bigger things bursting inside those small hearts—it was, Oh, look, Mamma, the erudite mules, the man standing on his forefinger, the bare-legged girls riding elephants, the jugglers and the wire-artists and the men and the girls on the flying trapeze . . .

The young circus critics ranged, experience-wise, from Munich-born John Coit, 2-year-old son of Maj. and Mrs. Hamilton Coit of 910 Beverly dr., who was seeing his first show, through his 10-year-old sister, Susan, who saw more circuses than she can remember when she was with her parents stationed in Germany.

Seeing All At Once

But Susan's eye was no more jaundiced than brother John's, which was not jaundiced for one-half of one second of the three-hour show.

And if you're ten, keeping your eyes on three things at the same time is no feat at all.

"They say you can't watch two things at once—but I'm watching three, Mommy!" Susan cried triumphantly.

One of the things Susan was watching, in the center ring, was the famed French aerialist man-and-wife team the Geraldos, who went on amid one of those small, personal dramas characteristic of the circus.

Madeleine Geraldos had three, blackish, quarter-sized burns on he rface suffered the day before, when one of those new-fangled American cookery gadgets exploded in her face.

Explosive Spaghetti

She was preparing for husband Rene a can of spaghetti which cooks in two minutes when it blew up. Madeleine knows almost no English words, but she had plenty of French terms for spaghetti which is supposed to cook in two minutes but doesn't. The burns were painful, but weren't going to stop her from her first American appearance under canvas.

Increase Cited In Municipal Court Cases

The case load on Municipal Court is steadily increasing.

This is the main conclusion in the court's business report for the fiscal half-year ended last December 31.

The report by Chief Judge George P. Barse has been submitted to Attorney General Tom Clark and the District Commissioners.

It disclosed that between July 1, 1948, and December 31, 1948, there were 70,064 new civil and criminal cases filed in Municipal Court, an increase of 2918 new cases or 4.35 per cent over the same fiscal period of the previous year.

"The major increases," Judge Barse reported, "were in the Class 'A' and Class 'B' civil cases and in District of Columbia cases in the Criminal Division."

Breakdown By Categories

Here is how the cases in these categories break down in comparison with cases of the same fiscal period for 1947:

One thousand, one hundred fifteen Class "A" cases (amounts from $500 to $3000) as compared with 1005, an increase of 10.95 per cent.

Nine thousand, three hundred ninety-three Class "B" cases (amounts $50 to $500) as compared with 8575, an increase of 9.54 per cent.

Twelve thousand, five hundred eighty District of Columbia cases in the Criminal Division, as compared with 10,917 such cases, an increase of 15.23 per cent.

It was pointed out in the report that the Class "A" and Class "B" civil cases "normally take longer to try than any of the other classes of cases filed in the court.

Judge Barse also noted that as the volume of business in the court has increased, one of the "most formidable" problems has become the disposition of civil jury cases.

Demand for Civil Jury Trials

"We have consistently disposed of a greater number of civil jury cases during each of the fiscal years," he reported, "but we have not been able to keep abreast of these progressively increasing demands for civil jury trials, so that on December 31, 1948, there remained on hand 706 undisposed of civil jury cases."

Court Hears Appeal in Realtor Case

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday heard arguments on an appeal against a lower court ruling that local and national realtor groups must stand trial on civil charges involving the anti-trust laws.

Defendants in the Government's civil action are the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the Washington Real Estate Board, Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the national group, and 15 members and directors of the Washington board.

The appeal arguments were heard by a tribunal consisting of Judge Henry W. Edgerton, Judge James M. Proctor and Judge J. Church Ford, the latter a visiting jurist from Kentucky.

Criminal Charges Voided in '48

The appeal by the realtors was against Judge T. Alan Goldsborough's ruling in District Court last July that the defendants must stand trial on civil charges even though criminal charges against the realtors had been dismissed in District Court the previous month by Judge Edward M. Curran.

Judge Goldsborough had termed "ridiculous" arguments by defense counsel that the Government's civil suit in its antitrust violation prosecution should be dismissed because the boards had been found innocent of identical charges in the criminal case by Judge Curran.

Court's Authority Doubted.

Yesterday, before the appeals tribunal, Attorney William E. Leahy, representing the realtor boards, argued that Judge Curran, in dismissing the criminal charges, had ruled on a question of law and not on a question of fact.

"Since it is a question of law," declared Leahy, "it applies throughout, even in civil cases."

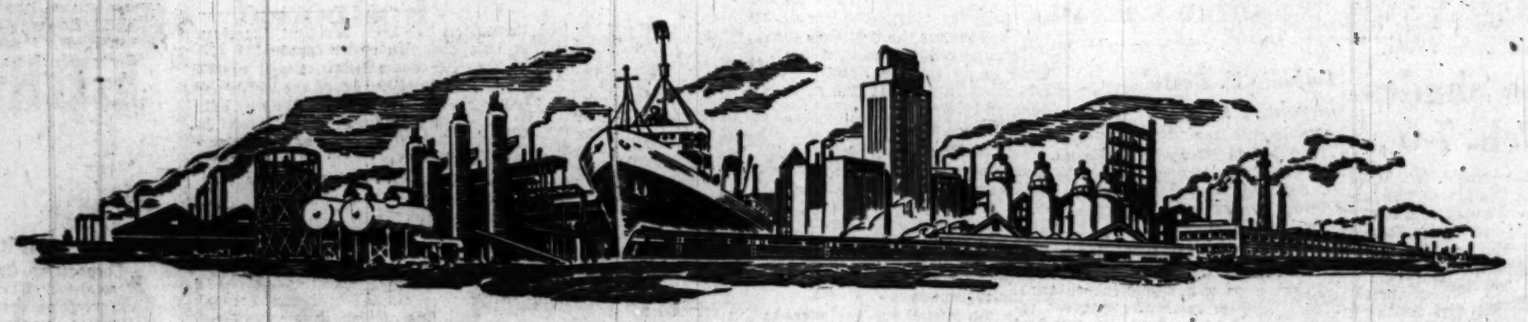
The Star Gazers

and Social Dreamers

won't like This One



SOME of the recent happenings in this country would indicate that the people are being sold down the river without being given the facts upon which to act.

For example—you may think this crusade to regulate and restrict business profits is no concern of yours because you are not a stockholder in business. Well, the critics and social dreamers won't like this one—but let's open it up and take a look.

78 million people actually do have a money stake in American Business. And since the chances are far better than even that you are one of them—it's your dollars, your life, your family, your future we're dealing with.

Let's take the direct stockholders first—the people they picture with bulging bankrolls travelling the Glory Road to riches.

There are 18 million. And they own this country's corporations. They are people—average people—who have invested their savings in the ability, and obligation of business to put their dollars to work and deliver a profit.

American Telephone and Telegraph is owned by 764,000 men and women. They own an average of 30 shares apiece. The great majority are working people with small incomes. The "privileged few"?

General Motors is owned by 433,000 people. 320,000 own 50 shares or less. More than 140,000 own 10 shares—about $600 in the business. The "privileged few"?

General Electric is owned by 249,000. U.S. Steel, by 227,000. Pennsylvania Railroad, by 208,000. Radio Corporation of America, by 206,000. Standard Oil of New Jersey, by 200,000—and so on down the list.

These, they say—all 18 million—are the "privileged few."

But let's look further. If you own an insurance policy—or have a savings account—you have a definite stake, indirectly, in business. Because it's your dollars, in part, which insurance companies wisely invest in corporation stocks and bonds—to make a profit. It's your dollars which banks wisely invest in bonds, mortgages, etc., of corporations and others—to make a profit.

In 1948—there were 78 million owners of life insurance in the country representing 90% of all the families.

If you divide the assets of all insurance companies among these 78 million—you will find $690 invested per average policyholder. And 31% of those dollars are invested in the securities of business and industry. Invested for profit!

Can you picture what could happen if business failed to earn enough profit to show an adequate return on the investments that are made to guarantee your life insurance?

A sorry prospect you say? Yes, but no more so than the prospect of the only Business System in the world capable of maintaining real security, being tampered with, undermined, compromised, maligned, overtaxed, stifled.

This question of whether business shall remain free reaches deeply into the lives and homes and future of every last one of us and our children. And from where we sit, it's high time for an end to this baseless effort to shackle and restrain—to substitute ways that are known to be failures.

That is—if we are to keep this nation and its people advancing, and maintain our position of bank, breadbasket, arsenal, and the last great hope of freedom in a bewildered, shattered world.

The Federal Diary

Davis Subcommittee Studies Methods of Faster Suspensions

How to suspend Federal workers for cause without red tape was studied yesterday by the Davis subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee.

The Administration bill, introduced by Chairman Murray, was both defended and criticized. To a man, employe leaders opposed the bill as written. They feared it would be abused.

Joseph Winslow of the Budget Bureau, who supported the bill in principle, suggested the bill be rewritten to define conditions under which immediate suspensions could be made up to 30 days by Federal officials. In general, he said such a definition should include situations where the health and safety of employes and Government property is endangered.

Other witnesses who testified for the bill were Kenneth Vipond of Civil Service; James Hard of the Treasury, and Admiral Paul Nibecker of Navy. They explained that the bill would be used to suspend employes who steal Federal property, report for work drunk, and who are insane. Under the present procedure, formal charges must be filed against the employes before they can be suspended.

Another House subcommittee yesterday gave its approval to a bill to allow FBI and other investigate personnel to use any five consecutive years on which to compute their retirement pensions. The present law, which allows these employes to retire at 50 after 20 years of service, fixes their pensions on their last five years of service.

The Kelly subcommittee of the House Labor Committee held another session yesterday on the Lesinski compensation bill. It failed to agree on a bill to be reported to the full committee. Another meeting will be held soon.

CENSUS BUREAU is reported to be looking over office space in both Richmond and Baltimore for the possible transfer of some of its activities here. The possibility of moving its age search section to space being vacated by the Veterans Administration in Richmond has been discussed.

Census needs space for about 9000 temporary employes to tabulate the 1950 census. It hopes to persuade Congress to approve funds for the construction of a new building at Suitland, Md., to house them. If that falls through, it will put in a bid for Navy's buildings at Suitland and move some of its activities to nearby cities.

PEOPLE: Preston Peden has joined the professional staff of the House Public Lands Committee. He was a member of the committee last year. He was defeated for renomination in the Oklahoma primary . . . Thomas Morgan of the Sperry Corp., may be the new chairman of the National Security Resources Board . . . John W. Davis, who drafted the NSRB reorganization plan, will be the new head of the Washington office for Bonneville Power.

STATE: Its Foreign Service Office finally has been abolished. Administrative offices serving both foreign and departmental employes have been set up under Assistant Secretary Jack Peurifoy. This is the lineup:

Haywood Martin heads up the combined personnel office; Arch Jean is departmental personnel officer, and Don Smith is foreign service director. Sam Boykin is chief of the new office of Consular Service. Walter Scott is chief of the new office of Operating Facilities, and William Hall is head of the combined budget office.

SURVEY: The Army check indicated that salaries paid by private industry were higher than those paid by Uncle Sam in the crafts, protective and custodial fields.

The National Association of Federal Mechanics makes this further point—that the Government itself has a wide range of salaries for similar mechanical jobs. Its members are in the classified service. NAFM says classified employes are paid $2800 a year for jobs paid $3380 at the Gun Factory and $4160 at both Government Printing Office and the Bureau of engraving and Printing. The classified mechanics want to be placed in a separate salary schedule within the Classification Act.

The Long subcommittee will resume its hearings on the salary-reclassification bills today. It hopes to end them Friday.

2 D. C. Boys Drown Under Tidal Basin Railway Span

Park Police Recover Bodies Within 45 Minutes After Friend Of One Gives Alarm

Two Washington boys were drowned in the Tidal Basin underneath the railroad bridge yesterday afternoon.

Within 45 minutes, the lifeless, almost nude bodies of the two boys were dragged from the river and were identified by police as Jack Holden, 11, of 712 D st. sw., and Royal Bates Haynes, 14, of 444 10th st. sw.

Carl Baggett, 13, of 627 C st. sw., who saw them go down, said he had just left school at 3 p. m. and was crossing a parallel bridge when he recognized his friend, Jack, floundering in the water under the railroad bridge.

The Baggett boy said he ran down flight of steps and squirmed under a locked gate leading to a walk under the bridge.

"I saw Jack holding this other boy by the hair and he looked as if he was trying to save this other boy from drowning. I reached out to grab them as they went down—and I didn't see them any more after that," the boy told reporters later.

Baggett, who can't swim, dashed back to the Fairbrother School, 10th and E sts. sw. and related what he'd seen to Jack's brother Frank, 10. The two returned to the scene and found Jack's clothes lying there.

Park policemen Sgt. J. H. Compton and Pvt. Alfred Capasso lifted out the body of the Holden boy with grappling hooks.

Rescue Squad workers with mechanical apparatus then made a fruitless effort to revive him. Shortly thereafter, Bates' body was recovered about 15 feet away against the viaduct wall.

Park police said the waters were receding from high tide, about 11 feet deep, when the boys were drowned. Police remarked that the spot was a much-frequented "swimming hole" and that they often had to chase neighborhood boys out of the water.

Holden has four brothers and two sisters, ranging from 13 months to 16 years old. Their father died last November, and their mother, Mrs. Bertha Holden, is expecting another child soon. Jack was in 4B at the Fairbrother School. He was a good swimmer, his friends said.

Haynes was in the fourth grade at Bell Elementary School. His mother, Mrs. Ora Haynes, is a housekeeper for a Silver Spring family. His father is in Cincinnati.

Citizens Want Playground Policies Kept

The Petworth Citizens Association last night asked the Recreation Board and the Board of Education to continue their established policies regarding the use of District schools and playgrounds.

The group of about 40 members at the meeting in the Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur sts. nw., also adopted a resolution indorsing the Strayer Report recommendation which calls for the abolition of half-year school terms.

Another resolution approved requested a new paint job, repair of sanitation facilities and other improvements at the Petworth School.

East Central Group Forms Junior Unit

The East Central Civic Association last night set up a Junior East Central Civic Association designed to teach the area's teen-agers their civic responsibilities and provide them with an opportunity to thresh out their problems with adults.

Henceforth, the junior group will meet one hour earlier on the same night as the parent organization. The 70 junior and senior high school students present at the organizational meeting at the Bundy School, 429 O st. nw. elected the following officers:

President, Marjory Joyner, Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School; vice president, Blondine Holland, Junior Citizens Police Corps; secretary, Francine Ellis, St. Augustine School; treasurer, Marian Montgomery, Dunbar High School; program chairman, Anna H. Whitson, Dunbar; chaplain, Dorothy Redd, Junior Citizens Police Corps.

Mrs. Mary Hawthorne Indorsed for Bench

Mrs. Mary H. Hawthorne, local attorney, was indorsed to fill a place on the Juvenile Court bench at a meeting of the Central Northwest Citizens Association last night.

Those attending the meeting also voted to request Congress to hold open hearings on the reappointment of Commissioner John Russell Young and to request temporary use of Roosevelt High School for Negro students.

Anacostia Group to Ask Traffic Light Data

The Anacostia Citizens Association last night voted to ask Traffic Director George E. Keneipp for the specific data that prompted his denial of their request for two traffic lights in the area.

Keneipp wrote the association that his office had made a survey of the two corners—Nichols ave. and V st. se., and Good Hope rd. and Minnesota ave. se.—and found that traffic conditions there did not now justify the lights.

Meeting at the Y.M.C.A., 17th and Good Hope rd. se., the members requested the time, date and data of the survey. The group also voted to call off the July and August meetings.

Cathedral Heights Officers Reelected

Joseph A. Roney was re-elected president of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night, in the organization's last meeting until fall.

All other officers also were re-elected.

The association adopted three resolutions. It requested District authorities to make a neighborhood park out of a District owned triangular plot at 39th st. and Massachusetts ave., nw.

It indorsed Mrs. Olive Faircloth for appointment as a Juvenile Court judge.

It commended Senator McGrath for his "interest and constructive efforts" in District affairs.

Recreation Board to Vote On Playground Segregation

By Chalmers Roberts
Post Reporter

The Interior Department has decided to force a vote on the segregation issue at the June 14 meeting of the District Recreation Board.

Irving C. Root, superintendent of the National Capital Parks and the department's representative on the board, said yesterday he definitely will file the required notice of a move to change the by-laws and end racial distinctions on the city's playgrounds.

An official announcement to this efect is expected shortly by the Interior Department.

Chances of the move's success appear slight as of today, however. Only Root and Mrs. Alice E. Hunter are on record for the end to segregation.

Two others of the seven-member board may be instructed how to vote prior to the June meeting. They are Albert E. Steinem of the Board of Education and Walter Fowler, District Budget Director who represents the Commissioners.

The Recreation Board's by-laws committee will discuss the issue at a closed meeting tomorrow. All board members except Root and Fowler serve on the committee.

Root said yesterday it would cost about $33,000 a year to run recreation programs on three play areas Interior is considering taking back from the Recreation unit if segregation is not ended. Root last week told Recreation members he was collecting this information.

These are playgrounds in Montrose Park and Anacostia Park and day camps in Rock Creek Park, all on Federal-owned land. The Recreation Board last week voted to end segregation at two other playgrounds on Federal land on a trial basis this summer.

Root pointed out that National Capital Parks now handles maintenance at the three play areas with District funds alloted to the Recreation Board by Budget Officer Fowler. He said that if Interior takes over the areas, the Commissioners through Fowler could pay the money to Interior direct without going through the recreation unit.

Root also indicated that Interior could take over Recreation Board employes now on these playgrounds, again using District funds now budgeted to the Recreation Board. This, too, probably would call for approval by the Commissioners.

Arlington Farms Closing Postponed

Under the guns of a 3600-Government-girl attack, housing officials last night indicated that Arlington Farms would stay open beyond September 30.

The Public Housing Administration announced last month that the "Girls' Town" across the Potomac would shut down because it had outlived its wartime purpose and is operating at a $201,000 annual deficit.

A rent increase on the girls' expansive dormitory is the key to continued operation, Federal housing officials have contended.

Housing Expediter Tighe Woods, it was learned last night, is now "definitely disposed toward granting the necessary rent increase at Arlington Farms to keep the doors open" beyond the end-of-the-summer closing date.

A PHA request for an average $9.50 rent boost, bringing the dormitory's room average rentals to $34 monthly has been presented to Woods.

A rent adjustment, clearing the way for continued occupancy, will also affect the 450-unit Langston Stadium, on Oklahoma ave. ne., near Benning rd., which has been scheduled for the same September 30 closing.

Women Lawyers Elect D. C. Aide New President

Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, attorney in the District's Office of Collector of Taxes, was unanimously elected president of the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia at an annual meeting of the group last night at the Raleigh Hotel.

Mrs. Faircloth, who lives at 2851 29th st. nw., succeeds Miss Mary-Frances Glenn, who was president of the association for two years.

Other officers elected were: Vice president, Mrs. Sarah A. Perrin; treasurer, Mrs. Marjorie D. Hansen; recording secretary, Mrs. Ruth Major, and corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary B. Bakshian. Two members, Mrs. Augusta Hanlon Brown and Miss Cathrine Edmondson, were elected to the board of directors.

$2,100,000 Asked By D. C. to Develop Marshall Heights

District Commissioners have submitted a request for $2,100,000 to the Federal Budget Bureau with which to organize a Redevelopment Land Agency staff and purchase land for the Marshall Heights slum clearance project.

The total includes 1½ million dollars for purchase of the project land areas either through negotiation or condemnation. The remainder is for setting up a small staff on a continuing basis for various RLA projects.

Congress originally authorized establishment of a 20 million dollar revolving fund for RLA operations and the proposed $2,100,000 would be the first installment

Cairo Hotel Club, Cited by ABC, Closes

The Salle de Champagne, night club that opened January 14 at the Cairo Hotel after the demise of the Cairo Club, closed permanently last night.

Joshua Levin of New York, co-owner of the night spot, said he and his partner, Robert Goodman, also of New York, would surrender its alcoholic beverage license to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today.

The club has been cited by the ABC Board on four counts, which were to have been aired at a hearing at 10 a. m. today. The charges included:

Two counts of permitting use of the premises for unlawful purposes—gambling; permitting consumption of intoxicants after legal hours of sale; and serving and selling alcoholic beverages during prohibited hours.

According to Levin, the club folded because "business wasn't good enough to warrant staying open."

He said he and Goodman had invested $25,000 in the establishment, "of which we'll carry away absolutely nothing."

The partners took possession on January 3 as the Cairo Catering, Inc. They opened the room January 14 amid the popping of champagne corks.

For a few weeks, only brandy and wine were served—no whisky or beer. Eventually, however, the latter were made available.

Ex-Detective Beckley Admits Some Income From Gambling

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Richard H. Beckley, 69, retired detective sergeant, yesterday admitted that some of his income which was large enough to enable him to keep $60,000 cash in a safe—came from gambling.

The former detective made the admission when testifying in the District Court trial of three men accused of stealing the safe and money from his home, 800 New Jersey ave. nw., last January. A quantity of jewelry also was taken.

Under further questioning by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, the witness vigorously denied that any part of his income came from the narcotics or prostitution trade.

Accused of the theft are Stance James, 30, of 1332 9th st. nw., his brother Oliver, 25, of 1600 A st. se., and Louis H. Singleton, 40, of 910 Westminster st. nw.

"Didn't that money come from narcotics and prostitution?" demanded Laughlin.

Under the cross examination Beckley also denied knowing well a "Jim Yellow," convicted narcotics peddler.

Later in the day, Charles James, 1310 11th st. nw., brother of two of the men on trial, testified that Stance told him that he (Stance), and two others had committed the robbery. The witness also testified that Stance had asked him to get a $1000 bill changed.

The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m. today before Federal Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Stolen Bible Traps 6 Youths Accused of Looting Autos

A Bible was the ultimate downfall of a "smooth-operating" ring of car looters, police said yesterday.

The Bible, police said, was one of many articles stolen over a period of months from cars parked near Union Station. Police said when they recovered it, they found the name of the owner on the flyleaf.

The ring charged by police with the car lootings consisted of a 17-year-old boy, who has been turned over to juvenile authorities, and five others arraigned yesterday in Municipal Court before Judge Armond W. Scott.

The five, held in $500 bond each for action of the grand jury on charges of grand larceny, are Bernard (Booby) Pratt, 19, of 1628 6th st. nw; George Henry Day, 27, of 1212 6th st. nw; Monroe Jones, jr., 18, of 37 I st. ne; Joseph Davis, 20, of 1021 Rovers ct. nw, and William Rivers, 18, of 811 New Jersey ave. nw.

According to Detectives A. L. Weber and J. B. Kline of the First Precinct who worked with several other detectives on the case, Pratt was leader of the gang. They said he organized the ring about three months ago when he was released from the National Training School for Boys on probation.

In addition to his 6th st. residence, Pratt also maintained an apartment at 48 H st. ne, Weber said. It was at this apartment that Jones and Rivers were arrested May 7, Weber added. Police went there after stolen articles were found in the apartment building's trash barrel.

Jones "talked," Weber said, and the roundup of the other four was completed within four days.

In the apartment, police had found, in a chest, a Bible in which was written the name of Reuben Johnson. A check disclosed Johnson to be a veteran studying in Baltimore. His was one of the many cars looted. So the six were charged with grand larceny in the looting of Johnson's car. As individuals and as members of the Pratt ring, the detective added, they have admitted looting between 55 and 60 cars of articles valued at more than $2500.

Driver Held for Murder After Traffic Victim Dies

A Hall, Md., man, who police said was deliberately run down by an irate truck driver, died last night at Casualty Hospital. The truck driver was charged with murder.

The dead man was identified as John Frank Beall, 42.

Police said he was struck in the District Monday by a truck driven by William W. Simms, 31, of Forestville, Md., after an argument involving a traffic accident.

Immediately after Beall was injured, Simms was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon—a truck—and yesterday his bond was fixed on that charge in Municipal Court at $12,000.

According to police, Simms was driving his dump truck when, in front of 1513 Kenilworth ave. ne., he struck the rear of an auto driven by Ralph A. Gardner, 23, of Upper Marlboro. Riding with Garner were Beall and John N. Tomlinson, 32, also of Upper Marlboro.

Precinct Detective Frederick G. Williams, who investigated, said a fight followed. He said Garner and Tomlinson gave him this account of what happened:

Simms struck Tomlinson on the hand with a shoe. Then Garner punched Simms in the nose. Garner and Tomlinson started walking across the street to call police. Beall walked back to the auto.

Suddenly, Simms jumped into his truck, started it and "headed straight for Beall." The truck struck Beall, then Simms "looked around out of the truck and drove off fast."

Williams said police found the truck a short time later, in a lot at 4214 Hunt pl. ne, and arrested Simms.

District Workers' Delayed Pay Rise In Sight at Last

Revenue Bill Passed By Congress Would Furnish Funds; More Legislation Needed

Congress has flashed the green light for $330 annual pay raises to District employes, but a lot of legislating must take place before the first paychecks are handed around.

Signs point to approval of the necessary legislation to give District classified and unclassified workers the $330 annual pay boost retroactive to last July 3, when Federal classified workers got that increase.

Lump Sum Payment Seen

Also indicated is lump sum payment in July of the $330 for the current fiscal year. July also is the probable starting time for applying the $330 annual increase.

What boomed the prospects for early realization of the District pay raises was Senate approval Monday of the 18-million-dollar city revenue bill. For the first time, this brought into sight the money to permit payment of the municipal salary increases. In its main outlines the revenue bill, including the 2 per cent District sales tax, now has the approval of both Houses.

It appears headed for quick final passage, although details of difference between the House and Senate versions remain to be worked out in conferences that may start later this week.

The House yesterday sent the measure to conference, and Representatives John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Robert E. Jones, jr. (D., Ala.), George J. Bates (R., Mass. and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) were appointed as conferees to meet with a five-member Senate group.

Meanwhile, District policy officials put a quick damper on a report that signing of the revenue bill would practically drop the pay increase checks into the hands of District classified employes.

Confer On Pay Status

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West and Auditor A. R. Pilkerton conferred on the pay status of classified employes. They concluded, according to Pilkerton, that a supplemental appropriation would have to be obtained before these employes could be given the retroactive pay.

Before his conference with West, Pilkerton advanced the view that the 1948 Federal pay act entitled classified employes to the $330 retroactive pay increase whenever the President signs the city revenue bill.

West differed. He said the 1948 Federal pay act left a question about whether the retroactive portion of the $330 raise could be granted upon approval of the revenue bill.

Pilkerton said that, aside from the legal interpretation, it would be necessary as a practical matter for most of the city agencies to obtain additional appropriations before the pay increase checks could be issued.

Sales Tax Hearing Held at Alexandria

Opposing views on a Virginia sales tax and the extent of State aid to localities were aired yesterday at a hearing in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, before the State Commission on State and Local Taxation and Expenditures.

The 21-man commission was appointed last year by Gov. William Tuck.

Pleas for a sales tax for school purposes were made by representatives of Prince William, Loudoun and Rockingham Counties. Arlington representatives, however, opposed it, and Fairfax speakers, who kept referring to an alleged State surplus, mentioned a sales tax only as a last resort.

Besides advice on financing schools, the commission also received these suggestions:

1. Cut down the number of counties from 100 to perhaps 10 to save money spend on local administration.

2. Make State income tax forms similar to Federal forms, and allow medical deductions.

3. Raise corporation taxes.

To Meet Dr. McGough

Alexandrians will have a chance to meet their new city health officer, Dr. T. F. McGough, tonight at 8 in an open house at the Alexandria Health Center, 500 block N. St. Asaph st.

Woman With Him

Plane Crash Kills Divorce Defendant

A former Washington man whose wife had filed suit for divorce was found dead in a wrecked plane near Moraga, Calif., yesterday with a woman companion.

Papers identified the man as Robert Search of 2009 M st. ne., Washington. The woman was Kathryn Yohn of Lancaster, Pa.

Search, 33, broke into the news

MR. AND MRS. SEARCH

here last February when he walked into the Ninth Precinct Station with a loaded revolver and asked to be locked up because he feared he would kill his wife, Mrs. Marcea Search.

A charge of carrying a deadly weapon placed against Search then was later nolle prossed when the U. S. attorney's office ruled he had wished only to gain his wife's sympathy by surrendering himself.

Suit Charges Cruelty

Last March Mrs. Search, who had lived with her husband at 9505 Wire ave., Silver Spring, filed suit in District Court for divorce on grounds of cruelty. She also asked an injunction to prevent Search from disposing of $25,00 in property.

Those who found the wrecked plane yesterday said it contained traveling bags, fishing equipment, portable radio and other gear such as would be taken on a vacation trip.

The plane, which did not burn, was found near the top of a high cliff seven miles south of Moraga, in the Oakland area. Time of the crash was unknown. Last log entry had been made May 10.

In Lancaster, Pa., Mrs. George D. Herman told reporters yesterday that Miss Yohn had roomed in her home for several months, while working in an industrial plant. She said she had met a man named Robert Search at a dance. Mrs. Herman said Miss Yohn left town last February without disclosing her plans.

The address in Search's papers was the residence of him, his wife and their two children, Donald Bruce, 8, and Renna, 4, until last October, when they moved to Silver Spring. Tenants there now said the Searchs had lived there for about five years.

Mrs. Search, who operates beauty shops at 1035 Bladensburg rd. ne. and 6711 New Hampshire ave., Takoma Park, first heard the news of her husband's death on the radio.

Sobbing, she told reporters, "Before we were married ten years ago, he used to go with a girl from Lancaster—which was near our home in Berwick. Before the last war, he was in the Army Air Corps for three years . . .

"I don't know what I'm going to do. It's such a shock."

A nurse at the Wire ave. address said yesterday that Search had been fond of his children, and had sent them postcards and presents from Texas and California.

Hatch Act Change To Be Considered

A Senate Rules subcommittee expects to consider this week a proposal to allow Federal employes in Maryland and Virginia to participate in local elections on a partisan basis.

The suggestion was advanced during hearings several days ago on a bill to reduce penalties for violations of the Hatch "Clean Politics" Act.

Government employes may now participate in local elections only on a nonpartisan basis and on permission of the Civil Service Commission.

Prices Hold Firm

Seller's Rush Closes Leaf Mart a Day

By The Associated Press

Growers rushed so much of their tobacco to market yesterday that all of southern Maryland's sales floors were blocked and the Upper Marlboro market declared a one-day holiday.

Prices, which are apt to do a nose-dive under such circumstances, remained surprisingly firm. Some poorer grades eased off slightly. The better grades were practically unchanged.

The markets at Hughesville, Waldorf and Laplata did not follow suit immediately, but the three sales floors at Hughesville, the one at Waldorf and the one at La Plata were all blocked.

The eight warehouses together have handled more than a million pounds a day since the markets opened on May 10.

Monday they sold 1,194,082 pounds at an average of $54.23 a hundred pounds.

An Angel in Blue Tweed

Gracious Mrs. Clay Relates Saga of U. S. Army Wives' Aid to Suffering Berliners

By Mary Van Rensselear Thayer

BERLIN—On May 12, triumphant day of the blockade lifting, I went to Im Dol to see Mrs. Lucius D. Clay, wife of our commanding general. The jeep turned past a rigid sentry into a curving driveway which cut between lawns dotted with beds of forgot-me-nots topped with pink, crimson, yellow tulips. As Berliners say, this is a "lilac year" and tree high clumps of lilacs thick with white, mauve, deep purple blooms, swayed everywhere.

As we entered the house the Clays' two black dogs, Sambo, a cocker, and George the Second, a Scottie, scuttled out. In the foyer we almost tripped over a life-sized, equally black toy dog. Mrs. Clay was in the low-ceilinged drawing room, furnished in comfortable French style and made brightly pleasant by a glass-windowed side overlooking the garden. Petite, becoming gray hair swept high, her aquamarine eyes were echoed by the blue of her tweed suit.

"It's funny," she said, "but three years ago, just as I was leaving Washington, someone from The Washington Post came to see me. And now when I'm packing the same trunks, here you are!"

In Berlin Three Years

I ASKED Mrs. Clay about her first days in Berlin and the work she had done with dependents—i.e. officers and enlisted men's wives.

Mrs. Clay came to Berlin in late March, 1946. It was terribly cold. Berliners, their houses destroyed, were living in icy, leaky cellars, with scarcely any food, light or clothing. "I've seen babies born literally in puddles down in those dark cellars and then wrapped in newspapers." She said, "In the Grunewald, the woods around here, starving people in rags, came every day to pick up what twigs they could find. They were so desperate looking that every day I would fill my knitting bag with small packages of bouillon cubes, coffee, cocoa. I'd walk through the woods, give out the packages. At first they'd refuse to take them—thinking I was trying to sell the packages. They just couldn't believe an American would give anything so precious to a German."

During that winter, wives of United States officers were terribly depressed. There was scarcely any means of transportation, no buses were running, lights were cut off early, water pipes, after years of disuse, burst and couldn't be replaced. To boost morale, Mrs. Clay asked a dozen wives to tea, suggested they form a woman's club purely for social purposes. Everyone was enthusiastic, and at Harneck house, a club for the United States military, they soon started classes in sewing, languages and bridge plus an exercise course.

For some time she had been helping the Children's Hospital. The hospital had no sheets, no pajamas for the kids and worst of all no soap. The stench was almost unbearable. One hundred and fifty children were suffering from bone tuberculosis, caused by malnutrition. Yet the sole ration available consisted of a cup of skim milk and two slices of black bread. Despite these impossible conditions, 75 of the children had recovered sufficiently to get out of bed—but they weren't allowed to because they had no shoes or stockings. So Mrs. Clay pitched in. Each child's feet was measured, money was raised among the Americans—General Clay's GI drivers donated $25, incidentally!—and the shoes were ordered from Sears, Roebuck & Co. They arrived in miraculously short time, flown in specially by the store. Later Sears, Roebuck, donated truckloads of clothes and supplies, all new and simply heavenly to the Berliners.

Clothing Unprocurable

"IN 1946 and 1947 there simply weren't any clothes to be bought in Berlin. So many had been bombed out and burned out, sometimes several times, that half the people were in rags. So after we were organized we started salvaging not only our own old clothes but writing home, asking friends and relations to send them to us.

"Naturally many pieces of clothing were sent for distribution in the eastern, or Russian sector of Berlin. Soon we heard that Germans, showing off their new clothes were boasting, 'Look what Uncle Joe gave us.' They'd been told, of course, that the clothes were gifts from Russia. We put a stop to this immediately, though, by sewing in every single garment tapes showing where the clothes had really come from."

One of the most interesting stories told by Mrs. Clay happened one cold winter day. Driving through Berlin in her car, she spotted a young woman whose shoes were literally a few leather tatters. Mrs. Clay stopped her car, beckoned to the girl, made her take off her shoes and then drew the outline of her foot on a piece of paper. The girl was told to come to Im Dol that afternoon. When she arrived, two pairs of shoes were waiting for her as well as several dresses retrieved from the salvage room. The girl, who happened to be a teacher from out of town, hadn't the faintest idea of Mrs. Clay's identity. Overcome with gratitude, she asked whom to thank and nearly fainted learning the American Commanding General's wife had stopped to measure her foot.

"My husband says," Mrs. Clay smiled, "this is the best way to defeat Communism. And as a matter of fact our Army wives' unselfish devotion in helping the Germans has made the most tremendous impression on them—shown them the meaning of a real democracy."

Squeezed Out Last Penny

THE Army ladies raised money with ceaseless enthusiasm. They charged annual club dues, 50 cents at each meeting, staged raffles, dances, theatrical shows, squeezed a penny wherever they could. They placed big cardboard boxes in every canteen and club—asked for any kind of surplus supplies, adhesive tape, hairpins, fruit juices, even old ribbon from candy boxes, because small Berlin girls had never had hair ribbons. They made a drive for sheets, extra sewing machines, sun lamps, medicines.

By 1947 a Community Chest drive was inaugurated which raised $40,000. They started buying food from Denmark—and finally each child in the hospital was given daily a pint of milk, an egg, a double dose of codliver oil and vitamin pills. The army women went themselves to the hospitals, taking portable victrolas, taught the kids to sing American songs. Now, when an American comes to visit Mrs. Clay says, they'll "let out a loud blast of song."

That summer there was a polio epidemic. One GI died. The Augusta Victoria Hospital director called Mrs. Clay. Victims were pouring in. They had no fruit juice, no mineral oil, no alcohol. She requisitioned an army truck which made the rounds of American houses, clubs. Several hours later it arrived at the hospital, filled with the badly needed items. The women went down and helped and brought in coffee to the exhausted nurses. Eventually the epidemic was controlled.

Mrs. Clay's next money-making idea was a cookbook which was called, appropriately enough, "Operation Vittles." It started by Mrs. Clay asking another officer's wife for a good French dressing recipe. Everyone contributed a recipe signed it, and added some amusing kitchen experience during the blockade. Included in the volume, which sells for a dollar, are reproductions of an 18th century cookbook given Mrs. Clay and a series of schoolchildren's drawings inspired by the blockade. Mrs. Clay literally sitting on stacks of books, traveled to other bases in airlift planes to sell autographed copies.

Last Christmas Bright

THOUGH Mrs. Clay insisted all her days in Berlin had been "explosive," I begged her to be more specific. The gayest was Christmas when Vice President-elect Barkley, Secretary of the Air Force Symington, former Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Royall, Bob Hope, Irving Berlin, Jinx Falkenburg, blew in to entertain the troops. Or, rather, Hope, Berlin, Falkenberg did the entertaining! The Clays had a huge Christmas tree and the airlift obligingly flew in all the "fixings." Her most exciting day, perhaps, was the one during the most difficult phase of blockade negotiations with the Soviets when Marshal Sokolovsky, was arrested for speeding in the American sector by a conscientious GI. The Marshal, in a capitalistic Buick, was going like a bat out of hell—but nevertheless it was a very touchy moment. Hearing of the arrest, Mrs. Clay said it was too late to do anything but laugh. The Marshal was released. General Clay wrote a letter of apology—and that was that.

Gay Spanish Dance Fetes Envoy's Niece

THE Spanish Embassy was the scene of another lovely dance last evening. Less than a month ago the Spanish Ambassador-at-Large and Senora de Lequerica gave an embassy ball for Spanish midshipmen, and last evening they entertained in honor of their pretty niece, Senorita Sisita Zorrilla Lequerica, who is visiting here for a few months from Bilbao, Spain.

Pink and white rose plants were placed around the blue fountain in the patio, and roses centered a buffet in the dining room. A midnight supper was served for the 100 or so young guests, and dancing in the drawing room continued till the small hours.

The young hostess received her guests in a bouffant frock of navy blue organdy. Senoritas Anita and Theresa Baraibar, daughter of the Spanish Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Baraibar, attended, one in black and gold, the other in an ivory gown of lace and net. The daughters of the Brazilian Ambassador to U. N., Senoritas Theresa and Sylvia Muniz, were also in the gathering.

Gardening, Muscle Control

Perennial Judy Anderson Tells How to Retain Youth

By Genevieve Reynolds

IF YOU'RE mentally or emotionally exhausted—become a good digging gardener. This is the advice of Judith Anderson, stage and screen star, who will be seen in the dramatic, intense role of the Chalcon princess in "Medea" in a special performance tonight at the Sylvan Theater.

"I relax mentally, physically and spiritually when working in my garden," she said when interviewed in her Shoreham Hotel suite yesterday just before dashing out for a train to Hershey, Pa., for a performance last night.

This summer blue-eyed, youthful-looking Miss Anderson is going to concentrate on cultivating a black rose. Dark red roses are her favorite and she wants to grow one so red that it will be almost black. But her experiment will be her secret until she succeeds.

Painless Slimming

THE Australian-born Miss Anderson, who for 25 years has been one of this Nation's top stars, also has mastered the art of figure control sans diet and calisthenics.

Her secret is perfect posture and muscle control. By tensing her muscles and keeping the body in perfect alignment plus riding, swimming and an occasional game of tennis, she keeps away all excess poundage. "Since I am travelling most of the time, I can't always get in outdoor exercises so I depend more on posture and muscle control," she explained, giving a brief demonstration of her technique.

"I never wear a girdle or a bra," smiled Miss Anderson. "No one would need to if they kept their muscles firm. I don't need a garter belt either."

Blonde, friendly Miss Anderson hates tight clothes and refuses to have her freedom of movements cramped by wearing them. She prefers play togs and sun suits for that very reason.

Chats With Truman

WHILE in town yesterday Miss Anderson had an off-the-record chat with President Truman. She says the Chief Executive was interested in the theater, but beyond that one comment she refused to budge.

When the curtain falls on "Medea" tonight, it will close Miss Anderson's record-breaking 519th performance in the play. Her husband, Luther Greene said that she had been invited to continue it in a world tour but had postponed the project for a while.

As for her next play, the great dramatic star confessed, "I hope it will be a comedy."

The American Newspaper Women's Club will give a reception today in honor of Miss Judith Anderson, star of "Medea" which is opening tonight at the Sylvan Theater. The reception will be from 4 to 6 at the Mansion, 2600 16th street.

D. C. Hadassah Group Installs Chapter Heads

Mrs. Elihau Elath, wife of the Ambassador from Israel, was ranking guest when the Washington Chapter of Hadassah held its twenty-eighth annual spring and installation luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

New presidents of the nine groups composing the Washington chapter were inducted by Mrs. Samuel Lubin, president of the Seaboard Region of Hadassah.

Among them were Miss Celia Gold, president, Business and Professional Women's Group; Mrs. Harry Burka, Connecticut Avenue Group; Mrs. Harry D. Friedman, president, Henrietta Szold; Mrs. Raymond Martin, president of the Highlands Group; Mrs. Meyer Greenberg, president, Prince Georges Group; Mrs. I. S. Tourover, president, Midtown Group; Mrs. Benjamin Kasow, Northeast Group; Mrs. Aaron Gerber, Upper Northwest Group.

Mrs. Benjamin Manchester was installed president of the Washington Chapter which serves as the ovar-all agency of the groups. She succeeds Mrs. Joseph Freedman, who gave the welcoming address at the luncheon. Mrs. Harry Rubinstein, spring luncheon chairman, presided.

In her address Mrs. Lubin reminded the group that the New Hadassah University Medical School is opening today in Jerusalem, as is the Hebrew University.

She expressed the hope that the new Haim Yassky Memorial which is being opened in Negev would also serve as a research institute for the entire Middle East.

MRS. TRUMAN (center), one of 11 outstanding women to accept honorary membership in the Woman's City Club yesterday, chats with Mrs. Fred Vinson (right) another recipient of the club's membership certificate, and Miss Marguerite Griffin, club president (left). The ceremony and reception was held at the club's headquarters, 1633 Eye st. nw.

Mrs. Truman and Nine Others Honored by Women's City Club

Mrs. Truman was one among 10 outstanding women in the Nation's Capital to accept honorary memberships in the Women's City Club. Presentation of the membership certificates took place in a special ceremony yesterday at the organization's headquarters, 1733 I st. nw.

Another recipient of honorary membership was Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who was slated to receive the membership in person, was unable to attend through illness.

Each woman was chosen because of interest in other women, plus achievements in the cultural, civic and welfare fields. Others honored were Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks, Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin and Dr. Margaret Sebree, president, National League of American Pen Women.

'Intangibles' Assessed

In addition to their recognized achievement, each new honorary member was selected for some intangible asset or quality, according to Miss Marguerite Griffin, club president.

The intangibles cited by Miss Griffin were the First Lady's loyalty to community, family and friends; Mrs. Vinson's ability to make each person feel as an individual plus her sense of humor; Mrs. Meyer's steadfastness to an ideal and belief; Mrs. Evans' unfaltering belief in the value of human life; Mrs. Gann's unselfishness in giving of herself; Mrs. Grosvenor's understanding of people; Mrs. Marvin's leadership; Mrs. Mesta's courage; Mrs. Ross' power to organize and to direct; Mrs. Brooks' ability to create a land of make believe, and Dr. Sebree's gift of reasoning logically and soundly.

Mrs. Brooks a Veteran

In presenting the membership certificate to Mrs. Evans, educator and newspaperwoman, the club president pointed out that it was this recipient who originated and suggested the plan for group voluntary health insurance.

Eighty-eight years old, Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks is a pioneer newspaperwoman as well as author.

Miss Griffin pointed out that Mrs. Mesta, called the Capital's No. 1 hostess, pioneered in the fight to obtain better working and living conditions for women.

Before taking over the post of Director of the Mint, Mrs. Ross served as Governor of Wyoming.

"I think a woman's primary purpose in life is to be a homemaker," Mrs. Robert Freer, radio columnist, mother and grandmother, told the 300 women present in a speech preceding the ceremony honoring the new members. "A woman, just an ordinary intelligent woman, can be a homemaker and still be active in the affairs of the world."

Declaring that this is neither a man nor woman's world, Mrs. Freer said, "We live in a world of two sexes, especially in this country where American women have so many prerogatives—legally, socially and economically—that are denied those of other countries."

'No. 1 Homemaker'

Along with the privileges women have responsibilities, viz, to be learned, mature and well balanced, according to Mrs. Freer who then dubbed Mrs. Truman the "No 1 homemaker in America."

Miss Marjorie Webster, vice president of the club, received the guests and introduced them to the new honorary members during the reception following the program.

Taking turns at the punch bowl were wives of the Eighty-first Congress, including Mrs. Homer Thornberry, Mrs. Clinton McKinnon, Mrs. James E. Noland, Mrs. Gerald R. Ford, jr., Mrs. Clare Magee, Mrs. Hugo Sims, jr., Mrs. Paul C. Jones, Mrs. Charles P. Nelson, Mrs. Lloyd M. Bentsen, jr., Mrs. R. W. Bolling, Mrs. Maurice Burnside, and Mrs. Charles R. Howell.

Egypt's Foreign Minister Honored

By Marie McNair

GUESTS at yesterday's reception at the Egyptian Embassy were introduced by the Ambassador and Mme. Abdul Rahim to a small graying man who speaks softly, smiles gently. He is Egypt's Foreign Minister, Ahmed Khashaba Pasha, on his first visit to the United States as chief of his country's delegation to U. N.

Although party hours were set from 5:30 to 7:30, it was closer to 7 before the embassy had filled up Early arrivals gathering around the buffet saw a high centerpiece of deep purple iris circled with a variety of teatime dishes from the Near East. There were platters of flaky rolled pastries, a honey-dipped confection crunchy and brown and filled with pistachio nuts. As a concession to her American friends, the hostess also supplied sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres, and potato chips to scoop up the pink-tinted cream cheese fashioned in the form of a rose.

Mme. El-Kouny, wife of the First Secretary of the Egyptian Embassy, poured tea. Passing silver dishes of tiny hot spiced meatballs were Egyptian man servants in dark blue full trousers, fitted mess jackets embroidered in scrolls of red braid, and topped with blue fezzes.

I met for the first time India's new Ambassador, Mme. Pandit, found her quite beautiful and very tiny, and wearing a black satin sari patterned in figures of gold. Her daughter, Rita, in a burnt orange shaded sari, was with her.

British Ambassador and Lady Franks were the center of a group and I recognized Stanton Griffis, our Ambassador to Egypt, now on leave from his post to serve as director of U. N. relief program for Palestine refugees.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin were there, the Ambassador telling me he's going home in June, first to Ankara, then Istanbul for his first vacation since 1939.

Saw the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. LeGallais, the Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri, Mme. Corea, wife of the Ceylon Ambassador, handsome in royal blue silk sari banded in gold, and Hussein Ala, Ambassador of Iran.

The Senate turned out in numbers to greet the visitor and in the group were Senator James Kem and pretty Mrs. Kem with their daughter, Kiki; Senator Theodore Green chatting with Miss Carolyn Nash; Senator Alexander Wiley. Mrs. Eugene Millikin was there without the Senator and from the House side were Representative and Mrs. Robert Hale, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Clarke W. Thompson.

Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol, came in, and Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State, was there with Mrs. Thorp. Raymond Muir, the State Department's Assistant Chief of Protocol, was making the rounds, and others were Mr. and Mrs. John McCloy, Justice and Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Owen Brewster, without her Senator.

Mrs. George Mesta was being congratulated on the Women's City Club award which she had received earlier yesterday afternoon, in recognition for her work for women, and in the group surrounding her were Mrs. Harry Vaughan, who came with the general, and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, with Mr. Biffle, just up from a long bout with pneumonia. General and Mrs. Gordon Young were circling the rooms and I met in passing Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, Mrs. Emil Hurja, whose husband is in New York; General and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Louis Renfrow, Mrs. Tom Burke, the Charles Rosses.

Mrs. A. C. Wedemyer, wife of the general, skipped in without a hat, and through the crowd I glimpsed Clarence Hewes, William Jenkins, Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Dr. Oscar Albertini, Mme. Valsamis, mother of Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann.

Capitalites To Be Greeted At Court Tea

Almost a score of residents from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will be greeted by King George and Queen Elizabeth at tea on Thursday, second of two presentation parties at Buckingham Palace. The 3000 guests invited for Wednesday or Thursday, have been divided alphabetically by their home countries.

"What to wear" the age-old feminine cry, will be of less concern to the ladies this year than heretofore. The rigid rules of correct dress have been relaxed since the war and almost anything goes in the way of an afternoon frock with a hat. Costumes will be governed somewhat by the weather but most Americans have settled on the perennial spring frock, with top coats if needed.

Air Attache of the American Embassy and Mrs. J. David Linebaugh, and Air Attache and Mrs. Richard P. Taylor, who were next door neighbors on Northfield rd. in Bethesda, are among those from Washington who have also been invited.

Also from Washington are Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hagen, Air Attache and Mrs. Carl Ginsburg, Dr. and Mrs. K. Benoit Smullyan, and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gentner.

Civil Air Attache and Mrs. Ernest A. Lister of Alexandria, Va., will be in the group and others are Mr. and Mrs. Preston Marshall, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Amar King of Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. Truman to Be Given Doll

When Mrs. Truman arrives next Monday at the preview of the thirty miniature rooms, sponsored by the St. Lo committee of the Washington unit, American Aid to France, she will be presented with a doll dressed in the authentic Plougastel costume. Little Marlyvonne Cann, daughter of the assistant military attache of the French Embassy, wearing the duplicate of the doll's dress, will make the presentation to the First Lady.

One of the miniature rooms, which a corps of workers have been setting up at 1712 H st., nw. headquarters of the Washington World Affairs Center, is a Breton kitchen, complete with cradle, spinning wheel, Brittany dresser china from Quimper and other furnishings typical of that picturesque section of France.

The doll was sent here by the people of Bohars, one of the Breton war-torn towns, as a token of gratitude for seven tons of food and clothing sent by American Aid to France.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, chairman of the St. Lo committee; Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, honorary chairman of AAF; Mrs. Harry K. Hickey and Mrs. George Y. Worthington, jr., co-chairmen of the local unit, have invited a distinguished group of sponsors from official, diplomatic and social circles to attend the preview at 3 o'clock, Monday.

The exhibition, created by Mrs. James Ward Thorne of Chicago, will be open from May 24 to June 18, from 10 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. daily.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Canadian Woman of Humble French Background Feels Outside Her Daughters' Lives; They Have College Education and Good Social Ties

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In a small town in French Quebec I was born 46 years ago, tenth in a family of 13 children. I had eight years education, all in French; and as was expected of me, I married early. I was a bride at 17 and a mother at 19.

My husband was seventh in a family of 10 children, and he also had eight years' education, but in English, plus a year of business schooling when he was 20. He is a printer by trade and I have done practical nursing for 15 years.

We have two daughters, college educated. The elder married a doctor and the younger is keeping company with a pre-medical student. Now their circle is growing larger and we find ourselves somewhat on the outside, unable to compete with the new friends and in-laws, some of whom have rather important positions.

Believes Daughters Are Ashamed of Her

THE GIRLS are very appreciative of what we have given them and I know it would hurt them that we should think they are somewhat ashamed of us; but we know they are. During Easter vacation the younger girl suggested that I take high school courses by correspondence,—a profitable hobby and I am quick to learn, she says.

But how can a person work all day and come home to endless chores, cooking, cleaning, washing, ironing, shopping, etc., and then sit down to study, when tired in body and soul? How does one keep up with these dear children and yet earn enough to meet the bills?

I am glad we gave the girls what was denied us; but sometimes I almost wish they had married "a butcher, baker or candlestick maker" and we still had our girls. I am suffering with an inferiority complex and I miss my "babies." Please tell me how to improve this dull mind of mine. T.R.

See the Situation in True Perspective

DEAR T. R.: Every good mother whose children are successfully launched on a course of "more abundant" living than she experienced, feels poignant at times about the "loss" of her "babies," as their progress seems figuratively to leave her behind.

However, every sensible mother knows that this "loss" is testimonial to her positive genius as a parent. If her children clung to her, moving in a duplicate orbit under her aegis, she would be a failure in terms of giving "fullness of life." And some sage has rightly said that real love is the desire to give fullness of life.

When children are in their formative years, it is well for parents to "keep up" with their interests and figure casually in what goes on, and thus be ready to apply judicious restraint or instructive guidance as required.

She Should Accept Herself With Poise

BUT WHEN the children begin to take form as adults, when they begin to create individual orbits on the adult plane, drawing contemporary-age friends, in-laws, etc., about them in a new design for living that is characteristically their own, then it is time for sensible parents to relax and "be themselves," as the saying goes,—no longer shaping their efforts to keep pace with the children.

In all probability your appreciative daughters aren't ashamed of you, or your schooling, or whatever; but rather troubled by awareness of your inferiority complex and wistful conviction of being an untaught outsider to the world they've entered. Perhaps your younger daughter thinks you'd feel better, more secure, if you had more education;—and indeed you might. But if you are too tired and too busy for that, my advice is: don't bother.

On the one hand, you should accept yourself just as you are, with quiet dignity and no apologies to anybody, for you've given splendid account of yourself thus far. And on the other hand, you should psychologically "surrender" your girls to their different orbits, and stand sturdily rooted in your own experience, which contains much solid accomplishment to give it meaning. M. H.

About Wedding Breakfast Menu

A friend has asked me to write you for suggestions for an appropriate menu for a wedding breakfast. It is to be served at noon to about 75 persons. A. C.

WEDDING BREAKFAST MENU

Strawberries au Natural or Minted Fruit Juice
Creamed Chicken in Patty Shells or Chicken Loaf with Mushrooms Sauce
Frozen Fruit Salad
Hot Rolls
Wedding Cake Coffee

If the guests are to be seated at tables, you could start the breakfast with a first course of fruit. Strawberries au Natural is a delightful way to serve this beautiful fruit when it is in season. Choose large, perfect berries and leaving the stem on, arrange them in a circle on a small glass plate. Place the pointed end toward the center and in the center of the plate place a mound of powdered sugar. To be eaten, the berries are picked up by the stem, dipped into the sugar and eaten. If the breakfast is to be served buffet style, you could omit the first course or substitute glasses of chilled fruit juice for the berries.

Will you settle an argument for me? Mary Brown marries John Smith. He dies. Now, how should I address a personal letter to her? As Mrs. John Smith or Mrs. Mary Smith. T. M. F.

She would be addressed Mrs. John Smith. A widow continues to use her husband's name until she remarries and so changes it.

I have an ironing board that collapses and folds up while it is being used. Apparently there is something defective in part of the two arms that support it. Do you know of any shop, preferably near the center of D. C. that can repair the board? J. F.

If this is a new board, I'd suggest you call the store from which it was purchased and discuss the problem with them. Possibly the board was defective when you received it and they may be able to make an adjustment of some sort.

If the board is not new, since you didn't say whether it is metal or wood, the only suggestion I would have for getting it repaired would be for you to call the store from which it was purchased or which sells similar ironing boards, and ask them to refer you to a repairman who can do the job.

We have a lot of parsnips on hand from last year. Can't possibly eat them all. Have heard that wine can be made with them. Do you have the recipe? O. D. W.

No, I'm sorry I do not. Do any Ask Anne readers have a recipe for parsnip wine?

The walls of my room have just been redone in light green. I would like to know if there is a paint or enamel which I could use to paint a students' lamp—the type with the coiling "neck" that makes it very adjustable. The shade of the lamp gets very hot. It is metal, like the rest of the lamp, and I am wondering if there is any type of finish that will resist the heat. C. L. M.

You could paint the lamp with a heat resistant aluminum paint or the black metal paint used on stoves. Both products may be purchased at paint stores. Before applying the paint be sure to remove any loose paint by going over the shade with a fine steel wool or emory paper. Wipe away any dust.

Can you tell me what to use to clean white doeskin? The powders I have used formerly did not really clean the shoes and the liquid polishes ruin the shoes. P. W. R.

I suggest you take these shoes to a reliable shoe repair man for his advice on cleaning. He will probably be able to give them a good preliminary cleaning and then recommend to you a cleaner which you can use at home successfully.

Slot Machine Referendum Is Opposed

Legal action to halt the June 2 Prince Georges County referendum on legalizing slot machines was promised yesterday by Walter L. Green, attorney for a Montgomery County resident who would be barred from operating the machines in the county if legalization is approved.

Green appeared before the Prince Georges County Commissioners to urge that the election be halted.

He said that the bill authorizing the election fails to repeal the gaming law which prohibits "setting up a gaming table" and that despite outcome of the election, operators would be liable under the gaming act.

"It would be almost a crime to spend the county's money for a law which is so utterly ridiculous," Green contended.

He contended his client, C. Walter Hendrix, 10130 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, Md., would be illegally deprived of his constitutional rights to do business in the county through a clause in the proposed law on which the referendum will be held, which restricts issuance of licenses to persons who are property holders, registered voters and have resided two years in the county prior to application for license.

Hendrix operates the General Amusement Co., 3608 14th st. nw., which now has approximately 50 pinball and console machines in the county. He has been operating in the county for 14 years, Green said.

Waldo G. Burnside and Robert Mathias, attorneys to the commissioners, ruled the commissioners cannot decide whether the law is good or bad but can only carry out the directive of the General Assembly which ordered the referendum, unless restrained by the courts.

Green later told reporters that he plans to file suit as soon as he can prepare the necessary papers. He said he was not opposing the election on moral grounds but merely because his client has been discriminated against.

Court Refuses To Restore Job Of Miss Bailey

Dorothy Bailey was denied an injunction in District Court yesterday which would have restored her to her $8000-a-year Government post pending a court ruling on his dismissal under the loyalty program.

Miss Bailey was suspended from her job as training officer with the United States Employment Service last November after the Civil Service Commission's fourth regional loyalty board ruled "reasonable grounds" existed for believing her disloyal.

Last February, a three-man Loyalty Review Board panel upheld the earlier finding and ordered the "immediate" dismissal of Miss Bailey.

Miss Bailey, who is an official of the United Public Workers Union (CIO) and lives at 4936 Butterworth pl. nw., countered with a test case of the Government's entire loyalty program, asking District Court for a permanent injunction reinstating her in her job.

Mandatory Injunction Denied

She also asked a mandatory injunction returning her to her job until her case is decided in the courts.

In denying the latter request in an informal memorandum opinion, Judge F. Dickinson Letts commented:

"The plaintiff asks too much. She would have the court assume upon this record that the proceedings under the loyalty program were erroneous and deprived her of her rights as an employe of the United States.

"Of course, if the charges of disloyalty were false, the consequences are indeed serious to the plantiff.

"On the other hand, if the charges are true, and this court should reinstate her, the harm to the Government might be perilous in the extreme."

Not Enough For "Interim Relief"

Judge Letts declared Miss Bailey had not presented enough of a case to entitle her to "interim relief," and that granting of such relief would in effect "nullify the President's Executive Order and the action of the loyalty board . . . all before the court has had an opportunity to determine the controversy on its merits."

Under court rules, the Government has until about mid-June to file an answer to Miss Bailey's complaint.

Powell Disavows Attempt to Rent Constitution Hall

By The Associated Press

Representative Powell (D., N. Y.) said yesterday Charles McClane of Pennsylvania had no authority to try to rent Constitution Hall here for a concert by Powell's wife, pianist Hazel Scott.

The New York Negro lawmaker cited dispatches last week from Harrisburg quoting McClane as complaining because the Daughters of the American Revolution, who operate Constitution Hall, turned down a concert application by Miss Scott.

"Charles McClane is not and never has been manager for Hazel Scott," Powell said in a statement. "He was not authorized by my wife nor her managers to try to make any arrangements for Constitution Hall. My wife's concert tour is finished until next year. When the DAR makes up its mind to change its policy, and I'm sure that one day it will, my wife will be presented there . . ."

Music, Art Join to Set Fast Pace

By Paul Hume

Last night was our busy evening of the year.

Ballet Soiree at Cafritz Auditorium, Alan Martin in a violin program at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, and William Watkins' organ music with guest violinist and women's chorus.

Marion Venable's designs for Promenade in the Park are familiar. Echoes of Massine and Lucia Chase mingle in the best ballet tradition. There is the comic man and the funny lady—a couple of slick looking city girls, and a young guy and his gal, much in love.

It takes good dancing to keep up the public's interest in such routines. Last night's capacity audience seemed more than pleased with the samples set before them. Special applause was directed at Walter Stroud and George Surmick, with plenty for the ladies at the final curtain.

Violin Music Pleasing

Alan Martin's formidable list of violin music came up to the high standards which are taken for granted at the Institute where he played. Of the Bach, Mozart, Graves, Clayton, and Hindemith we heard only the last.

While its themes and rhythms are clear enough, there are stretches where the violin must simply fiddle while the piano takes over. Young Martin understands this music from within. His playing is steadily maturing. It communicates a composer's intentions to an audience with ease and clarity, and that's a lot.

Of the lyric moments in Hindesmith's music, he made much. Of its problems, he made light. He is a violinist we certainly should hear from in the next few years.

Watkins Praised

William Watkins has been reviewed in these columns recently. Nevertheless because of the enterprise he continues to show in his programming he deserves further mention. Last night he played for the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs and the local Guild of Organists, as well as the general public.

His program included two novelties: Litany to the Black Virgin by Francis Poulenc, and Sigfrid Karg-Elert's Fugue, Canzone, and Epilogue, for organ, violin, and women's voices. The ladies were called upon in the Poulenc as well.

The Litany is addressed to Virgin Mary, and refers to a black marble statue of her located in southern France. The music is in the most familiar pattern of harmonies and sequences found much Poulenc. A dozen women from the New York Avenue Presbyterian choir, under the direction of Charles Dana Beaschler, sang with fine tone. They might profitably have used a more vigorous style in dramatic moments.

Karg-Elert's highly fragrant style is ill-suited to fugues, but last night's music was in the accustomed manner. Robert Fries played the violin solo at the close of the work with touching phrasing and tone. Here the ladies were perfectly guided as they sang the last line of the Creed, "I believe in the life of the world to come."

Cab Driver Wins Appeal, Reversing Pistol Conviction

In order to secure a conviction on concealed weapon charges, the Government must prove the accused lacked a permit, the Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The finding was contained in an opinion handed down yesterday which reversed the conviction of Andrew Lee Brown, 27, of 1512 5th st. nw., on such charges last year.

Brown, a cab driver, was arrested April 10, 1948, while riding with his wife and other passengers. A pistol was found in the seat near him.

The appellate tribunal was composed of Chief Judge Nathan Cayton and Associate Judges Andrew McCaughrin Hood and Brice Clagett.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

We Don't Dare Publish The Address

Alvin Guttag of 717 Chillum rd., Chillum, Md., suspects that, if our classified ads are to be believed, practically everybody can afford a new home.

The other day we advertised one on these terms:

"Assume $11,000 trust at 4 per cent. Payments $2.84 per month, including insurance."

After Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer picked 12 famous men as "Washington's most handsome," I started to get complaints.

One reader asked why such lists were always confined to headline names; "doesn't plain Joe Jones rate any consideration?"

An apt reply is at hand from Mrs. J. P. Jones of No. 1 Ridge rd., Cabin John Park, Md., who writes:

"Here is a picture of one Joe Jones—and he isn't so plain, either. He certainly rates on my list."

Even allowing for the fact that Mrs. Jones may be slightly prejudiced, we'll have to concede that she has nominated a likely candidate.

But she's not going to have the field to herself. Some of the other gals serve notice that they, too, want to enter snapshots of their favorite males in this good looks competition.

For example, Connie Krueger of 227 Bates st. nw, contends that Rod Clay, leading basso of the Columbia Opera, is the best-looking man in town. If you don't believe it, she'll send in a picture. She says:

"Rod is married to a very pretty girl, and is the father of two charming children. He doesn't know anything about my nomination, but I'll guarantee that he'll outshine anybody Mrs. Thayer named."

Barbara Batnick of 1805 Belvedere blvd., Silver Spring, Md., snorts: "Mrs. Thayer is a society writer. How could she pick her list from any other group than the one she hobnobs with every day?"

Betty Hendricks of 5709 43d ave., Hyattsville, Md., mutters: "Mrs. Thayer's list left me with definite doubts as to my ability to recognize a handsome male critter. I feel better now."

Edna H. Brightwell of 1201 Valley ave. se. defends the Thayer choices on the grounds that a society columnist couldn't be expected to give recognition to our handsome CAF-2's. Besides, she admits:

"I like to look at a good-looking man—in or out of public life."

However Mrs. Hugh G. Flynn of Purcellville, Va., joins the majority in deploring this rank discrimination in favor of the famous. Mrs. Flynn says we've got to concentrate on men in ordinary walks of life, and choose the 12 most handsome of them from snapshots sent in by their womenfolks.

So, gals—if you don't have a snapshot of the guy, trot out the old Brownie and take his picture. If we're going to argue with Molly Thayer we're going to need plenty of ammunition. She's no easy mark.

DON'T TELL ME; LET IT COME AS A SURPRISE

The other day I did an item about the Kass Building. I said that I couldn't figure out where its entrance would be until Builder Garfield Kass explained that several ground-level stores were being vacated on May 19, and that work on the lobby would start the next day.

That explanation sounded fine until the next morning, when I got an excited telephone call.

"You said that my favorite camera store was moving, and they're not," said the voice at the other end. "That is, they are moving—but not permanently."

It sounded very confusing, so I called A. G. Meltzer, who runs the Sterling Camera Center.

He says yes, they are going to have to get out for about a month, so that the Kass lobby can be constructed. During that time, he'll be doing business at a new stand—the cigar stand in the nearby Colorado Building, to be precise.

When the Kass Building is completed, the camera store will move back to its original location. "I hope this explains everything, and clears up the confusion," says Meltzer.

Of course it does. Except that, if the camera store is eventually going back to its original location, I still don't know where the entrance to the building will be.

French to Keep Troops in Zone

By Drew Pearson

Firmly and without fanfare, France has told the United States it will not withdraw its occupation troops from Germany—regardless of what is decided at the Big Four meeting on Germany.

Bonnet

The French ambassador, popular Henri Bonnet, told this to Secretary of State Acheson on Thursday on orders from his government. Bonnet, who has just returned from consultation in Paris, stated flatly that France does not feel the Germans can be trusted yet, therefore cannot take the chance of pulling out its occupation forces.

The French attitude has upset Acheson's plans somewhat for he was considering the evacuation of all four powers in return for quick elections in eastern and western Germany. Acheson has cabled the American Embassy in Paris to try to induce French Foreign Minister Schuman to change his mind before the foreign ministers meet May 23.

Barkley and Baseball

Being a loyal Kentuckian, Vice President Alben Barkley's first love in sports is horse racing. But he was highly pleased the other day when Del Webb, co-owner of the New York Yankees, presented him with a gold, lifetime pass to all baseball games at the Yankee Stadium.

"There's something I ought to tell you before accepting this lifetime pass," Barkley explained. "The way I feel now, I'll live to be 95 years old. But my doctor tells me I might even be around for 105 years. Now, do you still want to give me the pass?"

Webb assured the Vice President he would still be welcome at the age of 105—provided he rooted for the Yankees. Barkley is now in his 72d year.

Fast-Talking Humphrey

Economy-preaching Representative Robert Rich of Pennsylvania ran into a statistical buzz-saw when he tangled with freshman Senator Hubert Humphrey the other day on Federal aid to education. During a hearing by the joint committee on inter-governmental relations, Rich was complaining about Federal grants to States.

"Take this aid-to-education bill," he said. "Where will it end? We will spend 300 million dollars the first year, 500 million dollars the second year and the next thing you know it will cost the taxpayers a billion dollars."

"That's exactly what I hope," shot back Humphrey, "and the Government couldn't make a better investment. Studies by the United States Chamber of Commerce have shown that spending for education always yields a high return in economic prosperity.

"For every dollar Federal, State and local governments spend to improve school facilities, there is an average $6 return in productive earnings. The National Education Association reports that an illiterate man between the ages of 35 and 44 averages only $486 income a year.

"Elementary school graduates in the same age group earn $1228, high school graduates, $1764, while college graduates between 35 and 44 average $2465 a year. It's a proven fact that areas where the greatest illiteracy prevails also are the most backward economically. Do you want me to go on?"

But Rich had had enough. Though quite a fast talker himself, the gentleman from Pennsylvania was too happy to pass on to another subject.

Merry-Go-Round

Oregon's Senator Wayne Morse was literally knocked off his high horse the other day. Though an expert horseman, he was toppled when an unruly colt crashed into a fence and pinned the Senator's leg. No bones were broken, but Morse still has a bad limp . . . Back from the hospital, Majority Leader Scott Lucas has put an end to rumors he might resign as floor leader. He's in the pink and rarin' to take on any Republicans or Dixiecrats who cross his path . . . After Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee accused Senators Watkins of Utah and Donnell of Missouri of taking two thirds of the time at the North Atlantic Pact hearings, Senator Watkins began counting his back wordage. According to his arithmetic, he has taken up less than 15 per cent of the time of the hearings, though he and Donnell of Missouri together have done 42 per cent of the questioning

Taft's Act Changes

While combing through Senator Taft's minority report, Senator Thomas of Utah, scholarly chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, scribbled down some notes that throw a light on the coming labor battle in the Senate.

Thomas found that Taft had actually recommended 28 changes in his own Taft-Hartley law, but only 20 changes in the old Wagner Act.

Here are Senator Thomas' notes:

"Secondary boycott — Thomas prohibits one type, Taft prohibits all but 'struck work.'

"Jurisdictional strikes—no substantial difference.

"National emergencies — Taft adds injunction and plant seizure and mandatory report to Congress.

"Five-man board—Taft makes seven and nonpartisan.

"State law, closed shop—Thomas makes Federal law supreme, Taft makes State law supreme."
